Top Mideast officials to speak

Staff Writer

Two of the highest ranking officials from the United Arab Republic and Israel will speak on the Duke campus this week during a Middle East symposium.

The Honorable Yitzhak Rabin, or extraordinary and pleni-potentiary from Israel to the United States, will speak today at 7:15 p.m. in Page Auditorium.

Ambassador Rabin is the former Chief of Staff of the Israeli army in charge of the operations during the Six-Day War in 1967. A national news magazine called him "the highest ranking Israeli in the West." The Ambassador, a personal advisor of Moshe Dayan, is involved in the special United Nations mediations in New York this week.

"We can expect him to say something extremely interesting on the nature of the negotiations," said Jeff Kurzweil, co-chairman of the symposium. Kurzweil pointed out that the Mideast cease fire is over March 7.

Thomas N. Walters, also a faculty member at N.C. State, has contributed a Personnel names

asst. director

Jean Hunt Gaulden, former personnel specialist for Celanese Corporation and W.R. Grace Co. in South Carolina, has been appointed assistant personnel director at UNC.

Mrs. Gaulden will be responsible for guiding and planning, as well as other activities associated with the University's equal opportunities program. She will also deal with matters of staff counselling, grievance procedures, formal communications programs and administration of employe benefits.

She assumes this new post after serving as personnel manager for the Cryovac Division, W.R. Grace & Company in Duncan, South Carolina, since 1966. Before that, she was personnel representative for Celanese Plastics Company, a division of the Celanese Corporation, in Greenville, S.C. from 1964 to 1966.

The University's new assistant personnel director earned her bachelor's degree in psychology at Winthrop College in 1953 and her M.A. in psychology from Furman University in 1960.

The Egyptian negotiator in the peace Quarterly sale this week

Insane, bizarre, good, experimental and sick are some of the adjectives used by the editor to describe stories in the winter edition of the "Carolina Quarterly," which will go on sale at UNC this week.

"In reflecting on this issue's short stories and poems, since they are largely from people under 30, one imagines they reflect what's happening in the minds of at least a certain segment of the writing population under 30," said editor George Wolfe, 28.

Wolfe talked about the four short stories and several poems.

Luke Walton of Plainfield, N.J., writes about a boy and his blind sister. "While attempting to help her, he kills her," said Wolfe. "The boy tells his story from an insane asylum.'

A brother and sister have the same initials in another story. The girl, an artist, senses that their identities are mingling and interchanging. "There's a vague hint of sexuality," said Wolfe, "but this isn't the central point of the story, This is a very subtle, sophisticated piece by Ursule Molinaro, a French-English writer."

North Carolinian Ken Keffer, 20, has written another story about a brother-sister relationship in which the sister dies. "It's a fine semi-experimental piece of short fiction, very low-keyed and not at all heavy in the usual sense of the word," said Wolfe. This is the former UNC student's first published short story.

"Pursuit, Pursuit" is the story of a woman in New York who imagines men are following and chasing her. Wolfe describes this story as "a fine University English faculty. Miss Rogers' poetry has appeared in "Kayak," "Choice," "Epoch" and "Southern Poetry Review." James Clark, assistant professor of English at N.C. State, reviews Sylvia Wilkinson's novel "Cale." Clark adds cultural familiarity to his review since the novel is set near his hometown in eastern North Carolina.

Abortion

Students, faculty urged to support new bill

by Jessica Hanchar Staff Writer

The N.C. Senate will debate and vote on a proposed liberalized abortion bill next week. Proponents of the bill encourage students, faculty and townspeople to write or send telegrams to their state senators this week.

"What is needed now is some gentle political pressure in which UNC students can participate," said a leader for passage of the bill. She advised writers to "keep the simple and apolitical, low keyed, with no pressure."

The present state abortion law states that an abortion can be done for one three reasons: 1) if the woman's physical or mental health is endangered, 2) if the pregnancy is the result of rape or incest and 3) if there is a possibility of fetal deformation.

The present law also states three doctors must concur that the procedure should should be done and a woman under 21 years of age and not married must have a parent sign their approval.

The new bill states that abortion is a matter between a woman and her doctor and, if married, her husband. If a woman is over 18 years of age and not married. no co-signature is necessary.

The major restriction in the new bill is that abortion "on demand" may be performed only up to the 12th week of pregnancy. If over 12 weeks pregnant, a woman may get an abortion only for one of three reasons stated in the present law.

The abortion, under the present bill, must still be performed by a licensed physician but no longer must be performed in a licensed hospital. It can be done in a hospital-affiliated clinic.

A 30-day residency requirement is required in the new bill although the 3month requirement in the present law was declared unconstitutional. All letters and telegrams should be addressed to the State Legislature
