Playmakers

Ticket sales for the Carolina Playmakers' production of "Much Ado About Nothing" open on Monday, March 8, for season ticket holders and on Wednesday, March 10 for the general public.

"Much Ado About Nothing," one of Shakespeare's wittiest comedies, concerns the romantic episodes of two quarrelsome sophisticates and two less worldly lovers. The plot unfolds through some of Shakespeare's favorite devices—confused identities, witty dialogue, fast pacing and a comedy scale that ranges from slapstick farce to dark satire.

"Much Ado About Nothing" is directed by Tom Rezzuto. The production will be presented in the Graham Memorial Lounge Theatre March 16-21. Tickets may be purchased at the Playmakers Business office in Graham Memorial Building or at Ledbetter-Pickard in downtown Chapel Hill. Telephone reservations may be made by calling 933-1121. All tickets are $1.50.

James Taylor was joined Thursday night by a musician of some repute, Leon Russell. Russell was up-front pianist for Joe Cocker's Mad Dogs & Englishmen combine. Russell plays a number of other instruments besides the piano. He has also won an ardent following among his fellow tradesmen as one of the ablest studio musicians currently in circulation. Thursday night—presto—he was a bassist. Taylor, Russell, the intact Flying Machine, Carole King and Jo Mama reportedly left the audience emotionally and physically drained. (Staff photo by Johnny Lindahl)
