

Chapel Hill Mayor Howard Lee boards a bus to the hospital on a test run at 8:15 Thursday morning, following a short inauguration ceremony. All rides were free Thursday as an introduction to the new bus system serving the Chapel Hill and Carrboro area. (Staff photo by Cliff Kolovson)

Heels beat Duke, 73-67; play Ga. Tech in finals

by Rick Brewer
Special to the DTH

NEW YORK CITY—Simply amazing. That's the only way to describe the North Carolina Tar Heels.

You've heard about those guys. The kids were supposed to finish somewhere above Clemson and right around Maryland in the Atlantic Coast Conference basketball standings.

The only way they were given a chance of finishing in the ACC's top five was for three teams to drop out of the conference.

And if they wanted to go to a postseason tournament, they would have to pay to get in.

Yet when the National Invitational Tournament finals are played here Saturday, it will be those same Tar Heels who will be battling for the title. The Heels will play Georgia Tech, who beat St. Bonaventure in the second game Thursday night.

Carolina advanced to the finals by beating Duke 73-67 Thursday night.

They did it in typical fashion. As throughout the entire season, the odds were stacked against them.

Dennis Wuycik, the team's leading scorer, missed the game after undergoing knee surgery Wednesday morning.

The Tar Heels were playing the team that finished the season with a rush, winning 10 of 11 games.

And Carolina had already beaten Duke twice earlier in the year. There was supposed to be no way the Tar Heels could defeat a team as talented as Duke three times in one year.

Yet they did it. As has been the case all year, they did it with a great team effort.

First and foremost, there was George Karl, who scored a game-high 21 points and directed Carolina's four corners offense beautifully in the game's closing minutes.

Then there was Lee Dedmon, who once again played Duke's all-star center Randy Denton like he owned him. Denton, who entered the game with a 21-point average, ended a frustrating career against the Tar Heels with only 10 points.

Forwards Bill Chamberlain and Dave Chadwick had 10 points apiece and sub guards Kim Hubbard and Dale Gipple combined for 15.

And finally there was Steve Previs, who forced the usually capable Duke guards into numerous turnovers.

"Previs was brilliant as he has been all year," said Carolina Coach Dean Smith. "I thought our defense was superb in the first five minutes."

It was those first five minutes that proved to be the difference in the game.

Before Duke Coach Bucky Waters could get his famous seat belt fastened, his club was down 9-0.

Karl hit two 16-footers, Craig Corson hit a free throw and Donn Johnston and Chadwick scored inside for the early lead.

Carolina upped that margin to 13-2 when Karl hit from the top of the circle and then took a Chamberlain pass for a layup.

Sparked by reserve guard Gary Melchionni the Blue Devils rallied to within 17-16. However, that was as close as Duke was to get in the game and UNC pulled to a 31-26 halftime lead.

Led by Melchionni, who started the second half, Duke got within two, 40-38, with 13:53 to play. But Carolina outscored the Devils 12-1 to take charge.

Chadwick and Karl each had a basket and two free throws in that stretch and Dedmon and Gipple also got field goals.

Meanwhile Denton had picked up his fourth foul and Duke's offense was in the hands of outside shooters Rick Katherman and Richie O'Connor. Both hit cold streaks and the Blue Devils fell behind 52-39.

However, both began to find the range and brought Duke within five with 6:14 to go. It was at this time that Smith went to the four corners offense.

Karl, Previs and Hubbard ran it well and Duke was forced to foul.

In fact, Carolina did not score a field goal in the game's last seven minutes. But after going into the delay offense, the Tar Heels did hit 17 of 24 free throws.

The Daily Tar Heel

NC Rm.
Wilson Lib.
Chapel Hill, NC
27514

79 Years of Editorial Freedom

Vol. 79, No. 28

Chapel Hill, North Carolina, Friday, March 26, 1971

Founded February 23, 1893

Bikers acquitted in Cates' trial

by Evans Witt
Staff Writer

The three Storm Troopers accused of the second degree murder in the stabbing death of James L. Cates Jr. were found innocent early Thursday afternoon.

The 11 man-one woman jury spent approximately an hour and a half deliberating the evidence presented by the State to come to the innocent verdict for Ronnie Broadwell, Rufus Paul Nelson and William Johnson.

The defense presented no witnesses in the trial. Attorneys made their closing arguments and Superior Court Judge Thomas Cooper made his charge to the jury Thursday, the fourth day of the trial.

The State, headed by District Solicitor Herbert Pierce, rested its case late Wednesday afternoon.

Thursday morning the defense announced it would present no witnesses and the closing arguments commenced.

The all-white jury received the case at about 2 p.m. Thursday and returned with the verdict at approximately 3:30.

The three members of the Durham motorcycle gang were accused of knifing Cates, a black, to death in a brawl outside of the Carolina Union in the early morning hours of Saturday, Nov. 21.

At the time of the fight which led to Cates' death, an all-night dance was being held in the Union Snack Bar, sponsored by the Union and the Afro-American Affairs Committee.

The Orange County Grand Jury later criticized the University for allowing the dance to be held.

The three defendants were arrested later that Saturday and were bound over to the preliminary hearing by the Grand Jury.

The preliminary hearing was held early in December in Orange County District Court, where the three were ordered held for trial. In a special hearing later in December, the three were granted bail of $10,000 each.

Some four hours of the opening day of the trial were devoted to selecting the 12 jurors and the two alternates. Among the 14 were 12 men and two women, mainly coming from outside the immediate area of Chapel Hill.

Witnesses for the state began testifying late Monday and continued Tuesday and Wednesday.

The opening witness for the State was Campus Police Officer Charles Mauer, one of the officers called to the Union on the morning of the stabbing. He told of his encounter with Broadwell outside of the Union some minutes before the stabbing of Cates took place, but said he was inside of the Union at the actual time of the incident which led to Cates' death.

One of the state's material witnesses, Calvin Edwards, 17, spent a number of hours on the stand under both direct and cross examination.

It was unclear Thursday whether the State would appeal the case.

UNC deconsolidation possible; move may cost Friday his job

The University of North Carolina, consolidated in 1934, may be deconsolidated.

According to a story in the Greensboro Daily News, the Warren Commission on Higher Education has narrowed its possible recommendations on reorganizing the University to two possible moves—including a deconsolidation of UNC which could cost Consolidated University (CU) President William C. Friday his job.

The two possible recommendations are: 1) creating a single centralized governing board for all state-supported universities and 2) establishing a single coordinating board with 16 individual boards for each branch campus underneath.

Details have not been worked out for either plan, but if either of these two plans is adopted, and the Daily News story says one probably will be, President Friday's job will be gone.

The Daily News quoted Friday as saying it was "too early" to tell about the prospects of the CU remaining intact.

The Warren Commission has taken no votes, and the Daily News did not poll the membership. But the story quoted several unidentified sources as saying one of the two plans would probably be adopted. In doing so, they used such words as "feeling" and "sentiment."

The general feeling of the commission, according to the sources, is that the Consolidated University as it is now will not be around much longer.

The final commission report will be delivered to Gov. Bob Scott by a self-imposed deadline of April 15.

The commission is composed of 22 members—11 members of the State Board of Higher Education, seven members of the Consolidated University Board of Trustees and four other members representing other institutions of higher education.

William C. Friday

Bryan names DTH editors

DTH editor Harry Bryan announced Thursday his appointments to the editorial board for the 1971-72 Daily Tar Heel. Bryan will take office April 5.

Mike Parnell was named managing editor of the paper. Parnell has served with the paper for two years, as a staff writer and this year as news editor.

Parnell, a junior journalism major from Winston-Salem, has worked for two years as a news correspondent for the Winston-Salem Journal. Last year he was a news correspondent for WSJS-radio in Charlotte. This year Parnell has served as the campus correspondent for Newsweek magazine.

Lou Bonds, a junior journalism major from Winston-Salem, was named news editor of the DTH. Bonds has worked with the paper for the past year-and-a-half.

He is presently campus correspondent for United Press International.

Rod Waldorf was named an associate editor of the paper. Waldorf has served with the DTH for the past year as managing editor. A senior journalism major from Manteo, Waldorf has worked with the Daily Advance in Elizabeth City and the Raleigh News and Observer. He has also worked with WKIX-radio in Raleigh, WCHL-radio in Chapel Hill and is presently the photo editor for WUNC-TV in Chapel Hill.

Glenn Brank, a journalism major from Weaverville, will serve as an associate editor. Brank has worked with the DTH for two years, as a staff writer and as feature editor.

Brank has also worked with WCHL-radio news in Chapel Hill.

Ken Ripley has been named feature editor for the paper. Ripley has worked with the DTH for three years, as a staff writer, columnist and this year as national news editor.

Ripley, a junior journalism major from Alexandria, Va., will also edit the Insight page, a weekly interpretative news feature of the DTH.

Mark Whicker, a junior journalism major from Reidsville, will serve as the sports editor for the DTH. Whicker has served as a sports writer and assistant sports editor of the paper.

John Gellman, a sophomore journalism major from Charlotte, will serve as photo editor of the paper. Gellman has worked as a staff photographer and as photo editor since November.

Bryan said several appointments remain to be filled, but they will be staffed by the paper's first issue.

"I feel like we'll have a really strong staff," said Bryan Thursday. "These people were chosen because they're the best, most experienced students on campus."

Last edition

This will be the last Daily Tar Heel edited by Tom Gooding. After spring break, Harry Bryan will take over as editor of the paper. The next issue of The Daily Tar Heel will appear April 5.

James goes coed; Winston converted

by Mike Parnell
News Editor

Hinton James dormitory will have coeducational housing beginning in September and Winston dormitory will be converted to a men's dorm to allow the change according to an official release from the Chancellor's office Thursday.

The Chancellor also announced Project Hinton would be renewed and will continue to be located on the ninth and tenth floors of James.

The decisions were made public in a letter from Chancellor J. Carlyle Sitterson to Dr. E. Maynard Adams, chairman of the Project Hinton Evaluation Committee.

Sitterson expressed his appreciation to Adams and the committee for the work that has been done in evaluating the Project, which was set up on an experimental basis two years ago.

"Many details concerning the organization and operation" of the Project remain to be ironed out, said the Chancellor, but these should be completed "within a month."

Director of the Department of Residence Life Robert Kepner released a statement elaborating on the change of James to a coed dorm and other changes required to make the shift.

Space for 160 women will be provided on three floors in James, said Kepner. Including the women in Project Hinton, there will be 225 women in the dorm next year compared to 720 men.

Kepner pointed out the contrast in Morrison dormitory, which is presently coed. Morrison houses 377 women and 605 men.

"Strong impetus for the extension of coeducation in James was derived from a concern expressed by the students and the Executive Council in James that a more wholesome environment needed to be developed in the college," said Kepner's release.

After studying the effect of coed living on the students in Morrison dorm, Kepner said it is was found "that a coeducational living arrangement provides a meaningful, desirable and natural environment for the growth of students, both men and women."

Kepner said a James Advisory Board would be formed after Spring break to plan the development of a coed James.

The approximately 160 women's spaces in Winston dormitory will be relocated in James, said Kepner's release. Kepner had informed the women in Winston Wednesday night of the impending change.

"There was no mass opposition to the change in Winston," he related.

The reasons Winston was chosen, said Kepner, were a high turnover rate, the fact there are no freshman women and few sophomore women in the dorm and that there was little opposition to the change.

There will be no need for an extensive change in the dorm to convert it, said Kepner, since until 1965 it had served as a men's dorm.

A change resulting from the switch of Winston dorm to a men's facility is the relocation of the "I" floor, said Kepner.

The "I" floor, presently located in Winston and housing American and foreign students as part of the International Student Center, will be moved to the third floor of McIver dormitory.

Kepner said the changes in making James coed represent "a significant step forward. There will be a lot of time spent working out details between now and June but I am happy with the changes."

Persons wishing to apply for a residence in one of the four residential units, as they will exist next year, should submit their applications to the residence director at the dorms in which they wish to move. Application for these dorms will be submitted between April 5-9, for students presently living in the forms, and April 12-15, for students who wish to move to the dorms.