

Among 122 institutions Chemistry department ranks 3rd

UNC News Bureau

UNC's Department of Chemistry has been ranked number 3 among the 122 institutions in the country which offer analytical Ph.D. programs. A survey was conducted by the American Council on Education.

The report was published in the April 1971 edition of Analytical Chemistry. According to the article, the UNC analytical graduate program was ranked 4.44 on a scale of 5.0 trailing only Purdue University (4.59) and the University of Wisconsin (4.54).

The survey was collected from a questionnaire sent to every individual in the division of analytical chemistry in each of the 122 institutions. Other Southern institutions ranked included the University of Florida (10th at 3.77) and the University of Georgia (16th at 3.53).

Approximately 40 per cent responded to the question:

"... which of the terms best describes your judgment of the quality of graduate education at each institution listed?" Possible ratings included "Distinguished" (5 points), "Strong" (4 points), "Good" (3 points), "Adequate" (2 points), "Marginal" (1 point) and "insufficient information" (not included in computation).

Faculty members of UNC's analytical division include Professor S. B. Knight (Ph. D., 1938, UNC); C. N. Reiley, (Ph. D. 1952, Princeton University), who is Kenan Professor and has offered outstanding research leadership; R.W.

Murray (Ph. D., 1960, Northwestern University), acting chairman; and associate professors M. M. Bursey (Ph.D., 1963, the Johns Hopkins University); R. P. Buck (Ph.D., 1954, Massachusetts Institute of Technology); and T. L. Isenhour (Ph. D., 1965, Cornell University).

Awards and fellowships won by the division's members over the years at Chapel Hill include one Tanner Award for teaching excellence, the Fisher Award in Analytical Chemistry for 1965, and three Alfred P. Sloan Fellowships. They have directed 44 Ph.D. and 19 masters dissertations and served as editors and associate editors of several journals as well as editors of book series.

Members of the division, along with their associates which average from eight to 10 postdoctoral Research Associates and 25-30 graduate students, have been very active in a number of research areas, publishing more than 325 articles and eight books.

Graduate students and postdoctoral associates of members of the division hold many outstanding positions including the Analytical Research Directorship of Johnson's Wax and faculty positions at Northwestern University, University of California at Riverside, the University of Cincinnati, the University of Georgia, the Ohio State University, East Carolina University, UNC at Charlotte, Long Island University, UNC, Northern Illinois University, Old Dominion University, Attaturk University in Turkey, the University of Nebraska, Davidson College, the University of Tennessee at Chattanooga, Kansas State University and Pennsylvania University.

Bartsch asks changes after child hit by car

by Jim Minor
Staff Writer

The chairman of Victory and Odum Villages has requested three changes concerning traffic on Johnson Street.

Gerd Bartsch met with Chancellor J. Carlyle Sitterson and Allan Waters, director of operations and engineering on May 7. At the meeting he asked that speed bumps, speed limit signs and no parking signs be placed on the street.

The requests came after a child was hit when he ran in front of a car.

"The accident would not have happened if cars were not parked on the sides of the road," Bartsch said Monday. "Also, the driver had no way of knowing what the speed limit was."

Bartsch said a 10 mph speed limit sign had been placed on Johnson Street after he requested it earlier in the year, but it was put in a location that is not visible from the entrance to the village.

"The sign is a block and a half from the entrance to the village," he said. "Until he gets to this, a driver has no way of knowing what the speed limit is."

Speed bumps were put in front of Swing Building in December. "We need more to slow down visitors driving in the area," Bartsch said.

"I requested the no parking zone because people living here have off-the-street parking. Most of the congestion comes from visitors," he said.

"At noon the other day I checked and found that 90 per cent of the parked cars had no decals showing registration."

Bartsch's request calls for a zone between 101 and 109 Johnson Street.

A news bulletin will be distributed to occupants of the villages asking them to obey the speed limit.

Commencement

There will be a meeting of all degree candidates today at 4 p.m. in the Great Hall of the Carolina Union. Announcements and information concerning commencement will be presented.

'Iron Mike' rally set for Fayetteville

Fayetteville GI organizers have announced an "Iron Mike Memorial March and Rally" to be held Saturday, at 1 p.m.

The event is a sequel to last year's "Counter Armed Forces Day Rally," which drew more than 5,000 participants to hear Jane Fonda and other anti-war activists.

Iron Mike is the large statue at the south entrance to Fort Bragg. Commenting on the theme of the march and rally, one GI said, "Iron Mike is the symbol of the old Army and that spirit is dying around here."

Last year's protest prompted the Army to cancel its own Armed Forces Day plans, after Klansmen threatened demonstrators and tensions rose over the possibility of on-base confrontations between protesters and base visitors.

Members of GI's United Against the War in Indochina said the march will begin at 11 a.m. on the corner of Bragg Boulevard and Hay Street. It will travel down the main street of town, out U.S. 401 to Clark Park behind the Veteran's Hospital, for the 1 p.m. rally.

In addition to food, drink, music and workshops, there will be several speakers. They will include Howard Zinn, a political scientist at Boston University who has written "Disobedience and Democracy" and "The Logic of Withdrawal"; Puerto Rican women from the New York chapter of Young Lords; Bob Rix of the Washington, D. C. Military Law Panel; Bella Abzug, Congresswoman from New York; and John Froines, recently arrested for conspiracy in the Washington Mayday demonstrations.

Froines' appearance is somewhat in doubt, since he is still being held by the FBI.
