

CU offices move to new home

by Charles Jeffries
Staff Writer

The Consolidated University of North Carolina recently completed its move into a new $1.2 million administration building on N.C. 54, 200 yards from the 15-501 Bypass.

The move to the new building came as a welcome relief for the administrative personnel who were plagued by lack of space in the old building on Franklin Street.

"In the old building," explained Arnold V. King, vice-president of Institutional Studies, "we had offices in cubby holes, secretaries in the halls, and were without space for books, records and meetings."

Construction of the building was started in November 1969 and was completed in May, 1971, by the Clancy and Theys Construction Company of Raleigh.

Its modular design by Holloway-Reeves of Raleigh allows for changes in the future if more be desired.

There have been several donations made toward the furnishing and landscaping of the building, according to King. The most notable donation for landscaping was made by Cary Boshamer, an alumnus who also donated the new baseball stadium now under construction.

PEALS OF LAUGHTER
By Gary Arnold

"Bananas," the new Woody Allen comedy, is, in a word, hilarious. It opened yesterday at the Avalon 1, and the sooner you can arrange to see it, the better, since delighted and well-meaning friends are going to have a terrible time keeping the best lines and sight gags to themselves.

Luckily, "Bananas" is a comedy with jokes to burn—and since the most inspired tend to be blasphemous and scabrous and not at all "in good taste"—the pious, who would be well advised to keep their distance, may feel burning is too good for them. While it would take someone with a phenomenal memory and unlimited time to take the edge off all the gags, it's a tribute to the film—a sign of its essential vitality and originality—that friends will be tempted to spoil it for you.

It's only natural to want to repeat jokes this good. Hours later you find remembering an episode or punch line and succumbing to it all over again.

The film begins with Don Dunphy and Howard Cosell covering a Latin political assassination. The Washington Post May 20, 1971
