

Sunshine Co-op offering variety

Chapel Hill has its first handicraft co-operative, the Sunshine Craft Co-operative, for people who want to buy and sell goods at lower prices.

Debbie Hamlet, one of the 12 members of the operation, said cheaper prices are possible because the co-op eliminates the middle man.

The co-op, located above the Central Carolina Bank at the corner of N. Columbia and Franklin Streets, sells a wide variety of goods including clothes, candles, pottery, macrame and other items.

Expenses such as rent and advertising are paid for by membership dues and a small profit margin. Monthly dues are $10. The profit margin, from the sale of nonmembers' crafts, is 20 per cent.

Nonmembers who wish to sell their goods in the co-op set their own prices with the approval of Sunshine members.

Miss Hamlet explained that the co-op is run democratically with members voting to accept or reject each item for sale in their establishment.

She emphasized that all profits are used to pay expenses. Eventually, she said, the group hopes that enough people will participate in the co-op so that members and craft contributors can live off the profits of the goods sold.

The establishment, begun May 18, is accepting "new things every day." Miss Hamlet said the group hopes to eventually expand the operation to include food.

Members include students, street people and other Chapel Hill residents.

The Sunshine Craft Co-operative, in room 19, 105 N. Columbia St., is open Tuesday through Saturday 10 a.m.-6 p.m.

Solvent blast burns 3 students

Three UNC students suffered first and second degree burns in a solvent explosion in Venable Hall June 10. The students, Glenn Taylor, Douglas Kowzloski and Sam Weddington, were taken to the Infirmary by campus police.

Taylor was taken to the Emergency Room for initial treatment and later transferred to the Infirmary. He suffered first and second degree burns on his face and hands.

Kowzloski, a National Science Foundation Institute student, was treated at the Infirmary for first and second degree burns on his right arm, back and lower leg.

Weddington was treated and released from the Infirmary for first and second degree burns on his hands.

Dr. Francis N. Collier, chairman of the Venable Safety Committee, said the explosion occurred at 2:20 p.m. in room 1711.

The explosion, he said, occurred when the operator of the still containing the solvent forgot to let the fumes out before starting the machine.

The "flash fire" burned only the solvent, causing no sizable property damage.
