

Hot dogs, hot dogs and more hot dogs was the standard order Monday night at Hector's as several contestants tried to outdo each other in a hot dog eating contest. Hector's employe Tom Norby was happy to oblige as he hands Pete Galiniadis a dog.

Kevin Sherwood stuffs in another one as John Phillips looks on. Sherwood ate 14 by the two hour deadline, and that was good enough to take home the $25 first prize. (Staff photos by John Gellman)

High school editors attend 30th annual N.C. Press Institute

More than 270 high school newspaper and yearbook editors and their faculty advisors attended the 30th annual North Carolina Scholastic Press Institute at UNC here this week.

The Institute is designed to aid students and advisors in improving their publications. It includes lecture-demonstrations in news writing, makeup, photography, sports writing, editorial writing, staff organization, advertising and budgets.

Participants for the 1971 Institute are from 44 Tar Heel schools.

Dean John B. Adams of the UNC School of Journalism welcomed Institute participants at the opening session Monday, and Melissa Hardy of Chapel Hill, 18-year-old published novelist, was the speaker at the awards luncheon on Wednesday.

UNC Journalism Professor Walter Spearman is Institute director.

Faculty for the Institute includes Mrs. Zora Rashkis of Chapel Hill, instructor for newspaper staff members, and J.B. Edwards of Winston-Salem, instructor for yearbook staffers.

Special speakers included: L. E. Mullins of the Raleigh News and Observer and a member of UNC's Journalism faculty; Pat Reese, Fayetteville Observer; Jack Claiborne, Charlotte Observer; Bruce Philips, The Raleigh Times; Arlene Edwards, Winston-Salem Journal, and David Nicholson, Greensboro Daily News.

A panel on "Adventures in Editing a College Newspaper" featured Rick Gray, former DTH associate editor and columnist; Mike Parnell, summer editor of the Tar Heel and managing editor of the DTH; and Lana Starnes, news editor of the Summer Tar Heel and columnist of the DTH.

A highlight of the Institute was the announcement of the 1971 awards at the banquet Wednesday. Awards were presented for the best yearbooks and newspapers and for the best work done by individual students. New officers were announced at that time.

The N. C. Scholastic Press Institute is sponsored by the UNC School of Journalism, UNC Extension Division, the N. C. Press Association and the N. C. Department of Public Instruction.

Campus calendar

Yoga enthusiasts may meet and talk with Acharya Yatishwarananda Avadhuta, a member of India's Ananda Marga Yoga Society, on Wednesday at 11 a.m. in Rooms 202-204 of the Student Union. He will deliver a short lecture and interested people may stay and ask questions until 6 p.m.

Lost: One brown lizard skin billfold, folding wallet type. Please return everything except money—items are desperately needed. You may keep the billfold if you like. Reward offered. 933-1584. Les Wagoner at 107 Aycock.

the Paw Paw Patch
University Store

new shipment of
Soft Touch Greeting Cards

also:
puzzles
stationery
Busy Birds

Give Yourself A Lift—
Give Your Friends A Gift

MOBIL GAS 32.9-35.9

2 Cents Per Gallon Off With $5.00 Purchase
Beer, Wines, Champagnes—"Cold"
Cost + 10%

UNC's Favorite Drink . . . $4.75 Case
"Duck" Won't Fly! . . . $1.99

MOBIL GAS and FOOD STORE

2½ Miles North Of Police Station On N.C. Hwy. 86
Phone 929-5056

↓ THIS END UP ↑

announces its first
SUMMER SALE

tops — bottoms — other gear

ALL ITEMS-NO EXCEPTIONS

REDUCED
25-50 %

↑ THIS END UP ↓

149 ½ E. FRANKLIN ST.
Open Thurs. and Friday 'til 6:30