

Applications begin Friday

Toronto Exchange needs students

by Mary Ellis Gibson
Staff Writer

Applications for the 1971-72 Toronto Exchange will be available Friday afternoon at the Student Union desk. Applicants should complete the forms and return them to the desk as soon as possible.

Thirty UNC students will be selected to participate in the exchange. Applicants should sign up for interviews on a schedule to be posted at the Union desk.

Interviews will be conducted Sept. 19-25 by former exchange members and others affiliated with the program.

The exchange, now in its 13th year, is a cultural and social program for UNC students and the University of Toronto. UNC will entertain students from Toronto Nov. 4-9. They will travel to Canada during Christmas week.

Members of the program are selected on the basis of enthusiasm and interest in the exchange and Canada.

Interested students must be able to spend about five hours per week planning exchange activities until the Canadians arrive in November.

Although the exchange is funded by Student Government and donations from merchants, organizations, and individuals, each member must contribute toward the Canada bus trip. The assessment for each member will be a minimum of $30 and will not exceed $60.

Individual expenses for the exchange may be reduced during the year by fund-raising activities.

Applicants should have a variety of talents, said Edith Davis, co-chairman of the exchange. "We need people with skills in fund-raising, and in planning seminars, meals, and social activities, as well as people with musical and artistic talents," she continued.

Miss Davis described the exchange as

"open to all students." "We would like to encourage undergraduates and graduate students to apply," she said.

"We would like to carry out the exchange program past the actual exchange period so everyone will know it's not a closed organization," said co-chairman Vince Kopp.

He said exchange members are planning to hold open meetings in dormitories to discuss the program after their return from Canada.

Most activities associated with the exchange are open to all students. In the past, Canadian students have attended receptions, seminars and dinners during their stay in Chapel Hill.

Traditional entertainment for the Canadians includes attending a football game and taking a hay ride through the countryside. Faculty members, UNC officials, fraternities, and sororities host exchange members for various functions.

According to Kopp, "The basic philosophy of the exchange is that people of different cultural backgrounds can exchange ideas in interpersonal and intergroup relations."

"We hope that in the process of meeting Canadian students, UNC students are opened to learning about their country," said Miss Davis.

UNC students visiting Toronto last year were entertained with films, seminars and receptions by University of Toronto officials.

Students were given free time to see the city and to go ice skating, skiing and bobsledding. They spent a weekend on an Ontario farm.

"Each year new members fashion their own program," said Kopp. "The exchange provides a tremendous opportunity for creative individuals to get together."

Draft law for students clarified but confusing

by Evans Witt
Staff Writer

A clarification of new undergraduate draft deferments was issued Monday by the national headquarters of the Selective Service system—but it did not help much.

"Their clarification needs clarification," said Capt. Rex Warner, veterans Selective Service advisor for UNC students.

If a student held a 2-S deferment in 1970-71 as a full-time undergraduate student, that deferment will probably remain good, Warner said.

But Warner noted a young man entering school as an undergraduate for the first time this summer or this fall is not eligible for deferments, providing changes in the law are passed by Congress.

The new deferment bill has passed the House and will be taken up for final action in the Senate later this month, according to a Selective Service release.

Only those new students eligible for the draft lottery Aug. 5 will face induction in 1972. The U.S. Office of Education reports only 20 percent of male college freshmen face the draft this year.

Those freshmen ineligible for the Aug. 5 lottery will receive priority numbers in a lottery next summer. They are not subject to call-up until 1973, "when draft calls should be low," says the Selective Service.

College students will not be drafted in the middle of a semester; if called during an academic session their induction will be deferred until the end of that term.

In the release, Dr. Curtis W. Tarr, Selective Service director, advises college freshmen not to apply for 2-S deferments until Congress acts on the proposed changes.

The state office expects a directive from Washington to clarify misunderstanding.

The release concludes with the reminder that Presidential induction authority has expired and has not been renewed by Congress.

Under the provisions of the law, the release explains, the President could order induction of those men who now hold or have had deferments. This includes those who presently hold 2-S deferments.

Men dropping their deferments through graduation or failing to finish school would be drafted first. The release said if Army needs required it, those presently holding deferments would be called up.

Y recruiting tutors for school program

Recruiting is now underway for the YMCA-YWCA's tutoring program. Students may volunteer at the undergraduate library entrance through Sept. 15.

Approximately 200 students will participate in the program. Nora Gaskin and Tommy Webb are co-chairmen of the tutoring committee.

The program's goal is to aid children from elementary to high school levels, Miss Gaskin said Tuesday. "We hope we can help in a number of ways," she said.

Tutors act as teacher aides and in other capacities for in-school participation. They are also available for special attention sessions involving small groups.

An after school study center has been set up. Tutors will work on a one-to-one basis two days a week in one-hour sessions. These sessions will deal mainly with such subjects as reading and arithmetic.

"I think the program has been well established and has gained a fine reputation in the school system," Miss Gaskin said. "We receive a lot of co-operation from the teachers and principals."

Students should have some knowledge of the subject they are tutoring on the high school and junior high level, Miss Gaskin said. The main requirement for such subjects as elementary music and art is an ability to know what children like.

Early response to the recruiting has been good, she said. "Many people have come with specific things they are interested in."

"This is a good way for students to gain experience," Miss Gaskin noted. "But our main purpose is to help the children involved."

Smallness criticized

Snack Bar cups scored

by Charles Jeffries
Staff Writer

The failure of the Student Union Snack Bar to sell small soft drinks has resulted in complaints from some customers.

"Since we have two different operations — the Union Snack Bar with fast food service, and the Pine Room with full-cafeteria service — we thought it best only large drinks be sold in the Union," says Robert Greer, campus food director for Servo-mation Mathias.

Students complaining to The Daily Tar Heel said they thought the selling of large drinks only was a way for the food service to "make more money."

According to Greer, when the Snack Bar converted its plastic cups to Styrofoam cups this summer, workers began to sell small drinks as they had done previously.

"The Snack Bar was in grave error selling the small drinks and a representative from the home office in Baltimore pointed this out to us," said Greer.

With the conversion of the Pine Room into a full-service cafeteria, he said the company hoped to be able to serve full-course meals on both sides of the campus.

Greer cited another reason for non-sale of small drinks. He said meal plan students have the option of having one large drink or two small drinks. Greer said since the Snack Bar is "off limits" to meal plan owners, small cups are not needed.

The summer switch to Styrofoam cups has become a prime target of local environmental group, ECOS.

"Styrofoam cannot be recycled and it cannot be reused like paper can," says Watson Morris, ECOS office manager.

"Paper is a reusable resource that can be used to make more paper. Styrofoam, on the other hand, is resistant to the natural chemical breakdown that nature provides for many discarded objects," he added.

According to Greer, Styrofoam cups were introduced before he became food director. He said he thinks the cups were introduced because they provided better insulation and kept "hot drinks hotter, and cold drinks colder."

"We wrote the Dart Paper Company to get some information on the cups, but as of yet have not received a reply," Greer said.

"We like to receive constructive criticism from the student body concerning our operations and are attempting to organize a committee to discuss what might be done to work out some of their grievances."

News around campus

Organic food sold on campus

Once considered fad food or food of the future, organic or natural foods have increased in supply and popularity in Chapel Hill.

Most recent natural foods supplier is the Student Stores. Most foods include processed sugar-free candy bars. They come in a variety of flavors such as mint creme, lemon marshmallow, molasses coconut, and honey yeast. These bars range in price from 20-25 cents. The contents listed on the wrapper of the bar are reminiscent of a Kellogg cereal package. This particular bar boasts only 225 calories, slightly less than the average 10-cent candy bar. It also claims to meet the daily adult requirement of essential minerals and vitamins.

For munchers who like a nutritional snack, the Student Stores carry a supply of sunflower and pumpkin seeds, unsalted soy beans and high protein cookies. Sunflower and pumpkin seeds are 39 cents and soy beans are 20 cents.

No drop-add after today

Today is the last day a student may drop or add a course.

Students may go through drop-add by visiting the individual department or school in which they wish to change a course.

Tuition and fees must be paid by Friday at the cashier's office in Bynum Hall. Any student receiving a scholarship, loan or work-study grant who has not paid his fees should go to the Student Aid Office and check payment procedures.

Pass-fail registration will continue until Friday, Sept. 17. To select a course for pass-fail, a student should obtain a form from the office of his dean. General college students must have a selection approved by their advisors before submitting it to 308 South Building.

Woman assaulted on Franklin St.

An unidentified woman was assaulted and robbed Monday night on East Franklin Street by two young men.

The woman, reportedly a housemother for a University dormitory, was knocked to the ground and her purse taken at the corner of Franklin and Pickard Lane, across from Morehead Planetarium.

Chapel Hill Police Capt. Coy E. Durham said the robbery took place about 11:10 p.m. Monday. The woman reported credit cards and about $25 were taken.

Durham refused to release the name of the assault victim until arrests are made. He said there are several suspects and the investigation is continuing.
