APO holds rush today, Tuesday

Formal rush for the Alpha Phi Omega (APO) service fraternity will be held today and Tuesday, from 7-9 p.m. in the South Lounge of the Student Union.

All undergraduate men, including freshmen and social fraternity members, are eligible for participation in rush.

Rick Whittecar, publicity chairman, listed the three main activities of the fraternity as the Campus Chest charity drive, the Student Book Co-op, and the campus-wide lost and found.

"Spring is a big time for APO services," Whittecar said. "The main fall activity will be the Carolina ring sale."

Campus tours for any individual or group on campus are provided, free of charge, by APO members.

Invitations for membership in the fraternity will go out after next week's meetings.

Rush Chairman Don Morgan encourages all interested to "come by, meet the fellows, and learn about the organization."

Professors win offices

Three members of the UNC School of Journalism have been elected to positions within the Association for Education in Journalism (AEJ).

Dean John B. Adams will serve as vice president of the Journalism Council, Inc., the AEJ-sponsored research agency.

James J. Mullan was elected head of the Advertising Division, and Maxwell McCombs was elected to the association's Committee on Research, one of its three standing elected committees.

UNC faculty members also chaired several sessions and presented papers at the association's annual meeting, held at the University of South Carolina in Columbia.

UNC faculty members who chaired sessions included Michael Bishop, Eugene Shaw, McCombs and Adams. Those presenting papers were Bishop, Mullen, Eugene Shaw and Donald Shaw.

Graduate students who presented papers were T.M. Counts Jr. and Shirley Bach.

Eliel named Kenan professor

Dr. Ernest L. Eliel, former chairman of the chemistry department at Notre Dame University, has been named William Rand Kenan, Jr. professor of chemistry at UNC.

Eliel, a native of Cologne, Germany, and an authority in stereochemical and conformational analysis, has written 11 books and more than 150 articles, some of them in collaboration, for professional journals.

Eliel joined the Notre Dame faculty in 1948. He was named chairman of the chemistry department in 1964 and served in that capacity until 1966.

He served the past year as Du Pont Lecturer at the University of South Carolina.

While at Notre Dame, Eliel served as vice president of the American Association of University Professors and as president of the Notre Dame chapter of Sigma Xi, scientific honorary society.

He received his doctor of physical chemistry degree in 1946 from the University of Havana and his Ph. D. degree in organic chemistry in 1948 from the University of Illinois.

Eliel was a National Science Foundation Postdoctoral Fellow at Harvard University and the California Institute of Technology in 1958.

Carrboro board to discuss suit

The Carrboro Board of Aldermen will discuss Tuesday the latest brief filed by the Attorney General's office in the University's suit against Carrboro to collect the town's unpaid water bill.

The board will meet at 7:30 in the Carrboro Town Hall.

The Attorney General's office filed a brief last spring asking the court to strike a part of Carrboro's argument that the University should be held to charging "fair and reasonable" rates. The court ruled in favor of Carrboro.

In its latest brief, according to the Carrboro town clerk, the Attorney General's office has claimed that the University's rate is "fair and reasonable."

The University raised its water rate in July, 1970, by 120 percent. Carrboro has refused to pay for water at the increased rate. The suit is still pending.

Totten teaches 'Trees' course

Dr. Henry R. Totten, UNC professor emeritus of botany, will instruct a special non-credit course, "Trees," beginning Wednesday at the University.

The course, offered by the UNC Extension Division, will deal with identification of trees and how the life cycles of trees contributes to the ecological balance of nature.

Totten was a member of the botany department faculty for 50 years and is co-author of the book, "Trees of the Southeast."

Those interested in the course should contact the UNC Extension Division, 209 Abernethy Hall, phone 933-1124.

Suicides 11th in N.C. deaths

Suicides ranked 11th among leading causes of death in North Carolina in 1969, according to N.C. State Board of Health statistics.

In response to this problem the UNC School of Social Work developed a pilot course in suicidology—the study of self-destructive behavior.

The course was developed last year for the National Center for Studies on Suicide Prevention as part of a national project to evaluate materials for teaching suicidology to personnel working with crisis intervention.

Because of the school's efforts last semester, the suicidology course outline and materials will be available from the National Center for Studies on Suicide Prevention to other schools of social work across the country.

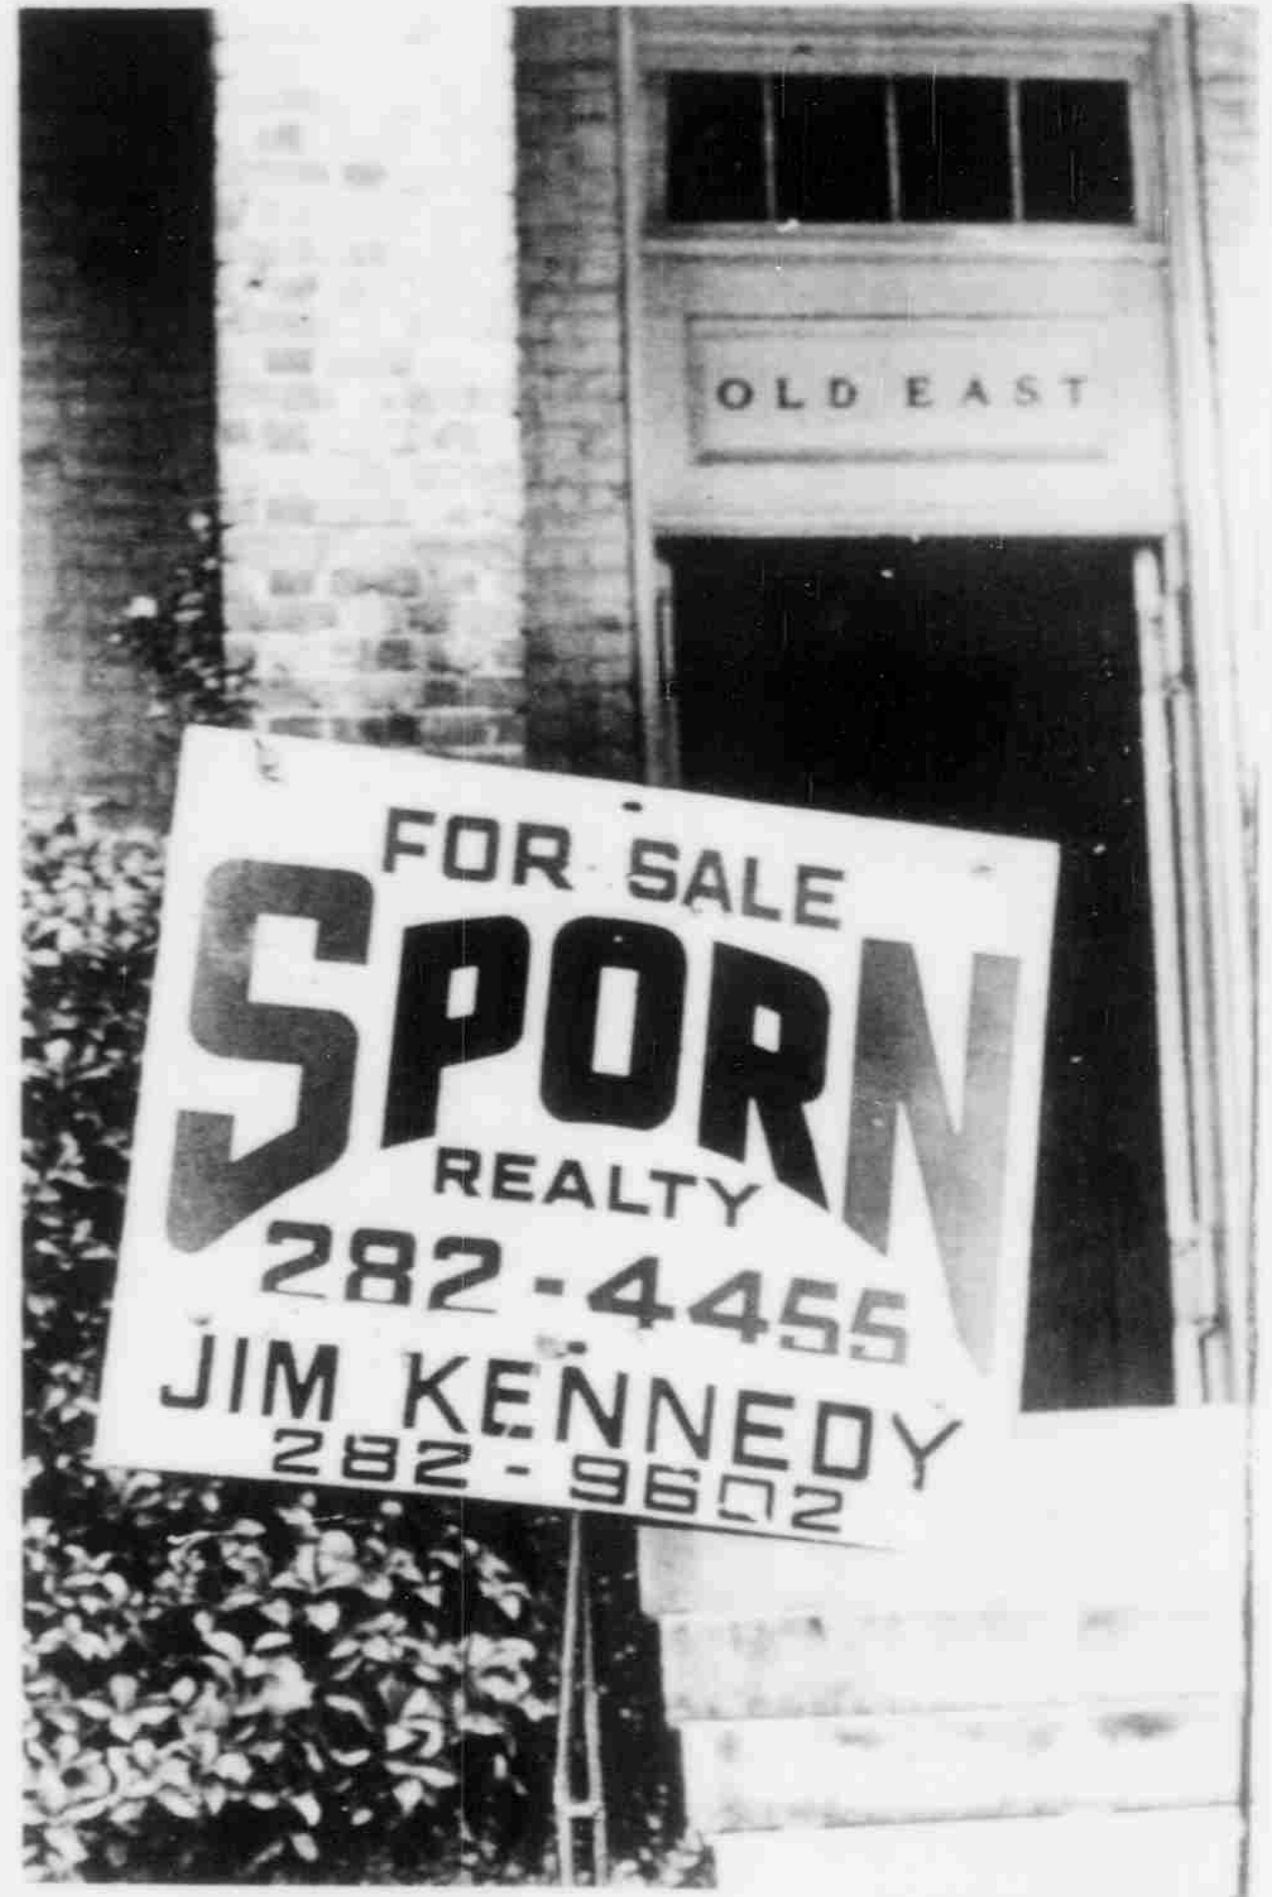

The course was taught last year by Dr. Philip Cooke and Albert King. Student projects completed for Cooke's course revealed more men than women in North Carolina took their own lives—422 men as compared with 132 women.

According to Cooke, most people who commit suicide first ask for help in some way, and their plea is often ignored or taken lightly.

"I don't think people are aware that suicides are such a social problem," Cooke said.

"There is a real need for special training in this area."

Cooke added, "It would be beneficial if all persons in our society could be alerted to cues and signs of suicidal tendencies in people."
