Sain voted outstanding lineman

by Don Harrison
Sports Writer

For his efforts in Carolina's 28-0 victory over Richmond Saturday night, 230-pound offensive tackle Jerry Sain was voted the outstanding offensive lineman in the Atlantic Coast Conference by the Atlantic Coast Sports Writer's Association.

Sain, a junior, from Lincolnton, N.C. played high school ball in a 2-A conference, and considers himself lucky that he was scouted, and recruited by Carolina. He said "a lot of smaller colleges scouted me, but I was real surprised before one of our conference games one night to find out that Carolina was scouting us."

Lucky for Tar Heel fans that he was scouted. Sain is highly regarded by the UNC coaching staff, so much in fact, that he started both the UVA, and VMI games last year as a sophomore in place of the regular starter, Mike Bobbitt.

The coaching staff knew he had the talent, and wanted to nurture it with experience.

That experience paid off handsomely Saturday night as Sain showed no signs of first game uncertainty. He handled his blocking assignments with strength, quickness, and finesse.

Before the season started, there was considerable concern over the ability of Carolina's mostly untested offensive line, but no longer after the front line blew Richmond's defenders all over the field.

It enabled the team to amass 368 yards in total offense, more than any other ACC team this past weekend.

Sain gives the credit to his teammates, but he was personally responsible for Lewis Jolley getting open on the right side on his 34-yard touchdown run in the second quarter. "We offensive linemen take a lot of pride in our backs," Sain commented.

"We consider ourselves as complimenting the backs, and vice versa. I take just as much pride in throwing a block, thus enabling one of our backs to score as I would to score myself."

"A lot of people don't realize the complexity involved in a lineman's job," says Sain. "Most everyone watches the ball, and is not aware that everyone on the line has a specific job on each play and has to execute precisely to give the backs the edge they need to get open."

And execute precisely is exactly what Sain did all night as the Tar Heel runners were able to get considerable yardage off his right tackle slot.

Sain noted, "our offensive line knew that a lot of people had their doubts about our ability. Two of Coach Dooley's favorite terms are 'Pride' and 'Confidence,' and that's exactly what we felt as a unit.

"We worked together for some 40 practices and knew we could get the job done. We couldn't wait until we had the chance to show everyone what we could do."

When asked whether injuries had an effect on the team's morale, Sain commented, "Jim Webster's injury hit us hard and we were really depressed over Bill Arnold's condition. Coach Dooley missed practice the rest of the week after Bill's mishap, but we have confidence in our entire coaching staff. The other coaches picked up the slack, especially our offensive line coach, Bud Moore."

Jerry gives others a lot of credit for his success last week. "I played behind Paul Hoolahan last year." Hoolahan was a good teacher to have since he was first team All ACC last year.

Most everyone would agree the score would have been a lot more lopsided if the first string had stayed in, and also if the offense had run for more than the three formations they employed.

"With everyone playing up to his potential we knew we had Richmond beat," said Sain, "so why show Illinois all our cards, plus the coach wanted to give our reserves some experience."

Speaking of Illinois, Sain regards Big 10 all-star candidate Tab Bennett, after watching him in game films, a stern challenge. Bennett, a defensive tackle will line up opposite Jerry this Saturday afternoon in Champaign. Sain regards the upcoming game as a supreme test of the Tar Heel offensive line. "Everyone believes we can do the job on Illinois."

Student stabbed in dorm fracas

by Doug Hall
Staff Writer

A freshman from Silver Spring, Maryland, received multiple knife lacerations early Friday morning in a fracas with two off-campus blacks at Morrison Dormitory, according to Chapel Hill police.

Todd Stephen Rogel, 18, a Morrison resident, was released shortly after noon Friday from the student infirmary in good condition, an infirmary spokesman said.

A Chapel Hill youth, Johnny Riggsbee, 19, of Ridgefield Apartments, was in Hillsborough Jail Friday, charged with assault with a deadly weapon in connection with the incident.

Lt. Lindy Pendergrass of the Chapel Hill Police Department said Rogel was walking toward the entrance to Morrison when he was confronted by a black who asked him for a cigarette.

Rogel told authorities he told the youth he did not have any cigarettes, but that the youth insisted he did, Pendergrass said.

Pendergrass said the black "snatched a pipe out of his (Rogel's) pocket and threw it on the ground" The youth then told Rogel he had cigarettes in his pocket, Pendergrass said, but Rogel answered that it was his wallet.

Another black from a group of about five outside Morrison approached the two and an altercation began, the police lieutenant said. He said Rogel was hit in the mouth and cut several times with a knife.

Capt. E.B. Riggsbee of the campus security police said Chris Wise, another student, reported the incident to campus police. Terry Garner, college master at Morrison, had Rogel taken to the infirmary, Capt. Riggsbee said.

He said Rogel was taken to the Chapel Hill Police Station shortly after being released from the infirmary to identify a suspect in the case. The Riggsbee youth was charged soon after Rogel went to the police station, police said.

Chapel Hill Police Chief William Blake said the youth charged in the incident was arrested early Friday on an earlier warrant charging him with assault on a female.

Blake said two of the knife wounds could have been fatal, but one of the lacerations was stopped by a bone and another missed a major artery by a few inches.

There have been reports of several incidents involving off-campus blacks on South Campus, Capt. Riggsbee said. He said several fights have occurred in James Dormitory this year.

James O. Cansler, assistant dean of Student Affairs, termed the incident "the most serious of a type which has occurred in residence halls this fall."

He said previous incidents have "occurred with sufficient frequency to give us some cause for concern."

Security forces will be increased in South Campus dormitories in the next few days, Cansler said, and house meetings are being held in most residence halls to discuss ways in which security can be tightened.

"We are concerned about the number of incidents in which non-University students are involved," Cansler said, "and we are taking steps which hopefully will alleviate this situation in the future."

Student Body President Joe Stallings said, "I don't think the University community should be closed to non-members but at the same time, I am concerned for the safety and well-being of every student."

"I feel that the most reasonable way to handle this type of situation," Stallings added, "is for students to report any person creating an unreasonable disturbance."

New registrar named

The first woman in University history to hold a "cabinet-rank" position has been appointed Registrar and Director of Institutional Research.

Dr. Lillian Lehman, a zoologist and assistant to the Provost for two years, is the appointee. She succeeds James Gaskin, now chairman of the English Department.

She is a member of Chancellor J. Carlyle Sitterson's immediate staff of vice chancellors, directors and advisors.

As Registrar, Dr. Lehman administers a number of University offices, including Central Records, Admissions and Student Aid.

As Director of Institutional Research, she assembles facts and maintains a repository of information about the University and its internal operations.

Dr. Lehman, former resident of Knapolis, received her M.A. and Ph.D. degrees at UNC after graduation from Catawba College. She has done post-doctoral study at Stanford University and has taught at the University of Vermont.

She has served on the Chancellor's Advisory Committee for Residential Colleges for three years and is a member of the Administrative Board of Student Affairs.

Humphrey is new coach of UNC diving squad

by Dan Collins
Sports Writer

There will be a new diving coach at Carolina this season, Charles Jerome Humphrey from Old Brookville, New York.

All you hard-core sports nuts around who followed every sport from lacrosse from swimming last year may remember Humphrey as the Tar Heels' top diver for the past three years and as co-captain of the 1971 Carolina swimming team.

When the athletic department found out that Humphrey would be taking graduate courses this year while his wife finishes up her undergraduate work, it was decided to hire him as a diving coach. He will replace Fred Sanders, the gymnastics coach who decided he didn't have enough time to oversee two sports.

Humphrey believes that his experience as a diver will help him in some instances but in others will be a hindrance.

"I think that my experience will help in that I know the basics of diving," he said, "which is something that every coach must know."

"On the other hand my experience could prove to be a hindrance. When I tell one of the divers to try a new and difficult dive I'll know exactly how he feels. I'll know the fears that are going on inside him."

"I'll have to push myself not to be too lenient," he adds.

An earlier practice start, three proven divers, and a promising freshman have made Humphrey optimistic about the upcoming swimming season.

"I think the outlook is pretty good," he said. "Everyone seems to be in good shape. Also, we are starting practice early enough this year to work out some of the problems that we didn't have time to last year."

The only new addition to the squad this season is freshman Larry May. A versatile athlete, May is also expected to help out Coach Walter Rabb's charges on the baseball diamond this spring.

"Larry has a lot of potential," said Humphrey. "He's got a couple of basic problems that most freshmen divers have coming in but I think he has the ability to iron them out."

"Hopefully he will be up with the rest of the divers soon."

The rest of Humphrey's squad consist of three sophomore divers with whom he dove last season. The three returnees are Rod Underwood, Don Chambers, and Clark Falkenstein.

Although the three were teammates of their coach last season the general feeling is one of optimism for Humphrey.

Tar Babies loaded with good linemen

by Howie Carr
Assistant Sports Editor

At the beginning of last year, freshman football coach Moyer Smith was faced with the prospect of building a team with only four experienced linemen to choose from. This season, though, that problem has been solved by the recruiting of some outstanding line prospects, including 6-4, 241 pound Ken Huff, a native of Coronado, California.

Just getting the necessary grant-in-aid signatures from Huff and his parents proved to be a real chore for head recruiter Clyde Walker, who first had to fly to western Massachusetts, where Huff was attending prep school at Deerfield Academy. Then Walker had to catch a plane to California to get the signature of Huff's father, a Navy captain.

"I came here because I liked the campus, the people, and the attitude," says Huff, who was also approached by Navy, Texas Tech, and Dartmouth.

Huff attended Coronado High School in his hometown, and during his senior year was named the All-League team. After deciding on a post-graduate year, Huff went to Deerfield last fall, where he was selected to the All-New England prep school team. At both Coronado and Deerfield Huff was voted the school's most valuable lineman.

Although their opening game against

N.C. State is scheduled for October 4, the Tar Babies still haven't had a lot of practice time together. They practice as a unit twice a week, while the other three days are occupied by scrimmages with the varsity.

"At first it really scared me, going up against the varsity, just because they were 'the varsity,'" Huff says. "Now it doesn't bother me that much, and sometimes I can hold my own against them."

Although Huff has been playing defensive tackle in the early practices, he could also see some action on the offensive line once the season begins.

Besides Huff, other outstanding line prospects for the Tar Babies include 6-3, 220 pounder Tommy Collins, of Richmond, Virginia; Pete Marchetti, a 6-4, 231 pounder from New Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; Ernie Razzano, a 6-1, 230 pound native of Howard Beach, New York; and 6-1, 262 pound Ronnie Robinson of Burlington, N.C.

UNC student injured

A UNC student was taken to the infirmary Thursday night after an intramural football game accident.

Tom Shea, a sophomore chemistry major from Greenville, suffered a mild concussion, Dr. Carolyn Dixon reported Friday. Shea was to have been released Friday afternoon.

Witnesses said Shea and a teammate were attempting to block a pass when they ran into each other. Shea was unconscious for several minutes before an ambulance was summoned, observers said.

The accident occurred on Ehringhaus field in a grid match between Kappa Alpha and Delta Epsilon fraternities.

Rugby today

The UNC rugby team begins a new season today when it takes on the James River Rugby Club of Richmond at 2 on Ehringhaus Field.

The B side game will begin immediately after the conclusion of the A side's contest.
