

Fingerpainting on a lazy afternoon...

The Student Union sponsored a fingerpainting session Tuesday afternoon in the Pit. Deborah Glosson (l.) really gets into her painting. A number of students (center) spend the afternoon doing a little dabbling, sort of getting back to their childhood. And, when it was all over, Reid Tunstall decided he should show his painting off. To increase influence

IFC planning new programs

by Sue English
Staff Writer

The Inter-Fraternity Council (IFC) will sponsor several new programs this year in an effort to increase its influence at the University. IFC vice president Steve Blank said Tuesday.

Blank said the "Grill," a program of small panel discussions sponsored by IFC, will begin Oct. 17 when State Sen. John Burney (D-New Hanover) will speak here on deconsolidation of the University.

A representative of Gov. Robert Scott will speak after Burney to defend the governor's proposals on restructuring of state higher education.

Blank said three or four additional panel discussions will be held this year. Admission to the programs will be open first to fraternity members and then the general public immediately preceding the presentation.

IFC will also sponsor two major lectures, one in the fall and another in the spring, either solely as an IFC speaker program or part of the Carolina Forum.

Blank said several of the programs sponsored by IFC in the past will continue this year, including Christmas festivities at the Murdock Center, Upward Bound, Campus Chest and the Bershach Scholarship.

The annual Christmas project for the Murdock Center, a school for mentally retarded children, includes collection of clothing and toys by various fraternity houses and a Christmas party with a Santa Claus and refreshments.

Upward Bound, a federally-funded program aiding high school underachievers, received $1,700 last year through the combined efforts of fraternities and sororities on campus.

One of the largest money-making projects of the year is Campus Chest—a week of activities in the spring held to raise money for various charities in the community sponsored by Alpha Phi Omega service fraternity.

The Bershach Scholarship, in which two or three individuals in financial need are given money for tuition, room and board, receives $1,000 annually from IFC.

In addition to these annual contributions, Blank said the IFC usually donates money to one important program a year.

Last year $1,000 was donated by the IFC to the Fine Arts Festival.

Ideas for IFC involvement in the future include lectures in fraternity houses, led by professors and open to the public, and a self-evaluation project, in which professors and campus religious organizations have been invited to help each house evaluate the changes it needs to make.

Blank said IFC hopes to do some panel work in extended areas of the campus, "in an effort to enable the freshmen to learn more about their school."

A convention involving IFC members will be held late this fall, in which matters such as rush, fraternity reform and the role of the fraternity on campus will be discussed.

News around campus

RCF meets tonight

The Residence College Federation (RCF) will meet at 6 p.m. today to resume discussion on two of last year's controversial issues—required campus residency and an evaluation of the University Physical Plant.

RCF chairman Steve Saunders said the waiver to compulsory campus residency for sophomores and junior transfers was granted last spring because of anticipated overcrowding this fall.

"This is just a temporary thing," he said, "but it needs to be permanent. At tonight's meeting we will consider whether or not to take action to make it permanent."

Discussion of the physical plant evaluation was postponed in the spring because of some changes being made that would give the UNC office of Residence Life more control over the Physical Plant.

Saunders said because of those changes, any study made then would have been out of date immediately.

"Also," he said, "we were hoping some things would be cleared up as a result of the changes—such as the excessive cost accompanying repairs and the long delay in making those repairs."

The proposed evaluation will reflect the findings of a student-faculty committee on ways to make the physical plant more efficient, Saunders said.

Student vote urged on liquor

A UNC student from Charlotte urged other students from Charlotte Monday to register to vote on a city referendum proposing "liquor by the drink."

Miss Hilary Forbis said the deadline for voter registration in the referendum is Saturday.

About 3,000 UNC students are from Charlotte, she said, and their votes could have a decisive effect on the result of the referendum.

"A bit city like Charlotte needs to develop places where young adults can go to socialize and sit down to enjoy a mixed drink," Miss Forbis said.

Frosh Council applications due

The deadline for applications for the Freshman Council is Thursday.

Applications should be mailed to or brought by the office of Student Body President Joe Stallings, Suite C, Student Union.

The Freshman Council is an informational and organizational group designed to help freshmen learn about the University and become more involved.

Debaters open season

The UNC debate team began its regular season Sunday with the first in a series of contests against the University of Pittsburgh in Pittsburgh, Pa.

The Carolina debaters will face Pitt in a four-day series of debates at 10 Pittsburgh area high schools.

UNC is scheduled to face 50 to 60 schools this season in more than 30 tournaments throughout the nation.

This year's topic is: "Resolved, that greater control should be placed on gathering and utilization of information on U.S. citizens by government agencies."

The nine-man team won five out of 12 major tournaments throughout the nation during 1970-1971 and advanced to the quarter-finals of the national tournament last spring.

Debate coach Robert Cox said the team has been given enough money to support five additional members and hopes to improve on last year's record.

Two debaters who won top honors at the national tournament last year, Joe McGuire and Joe Loveland, have returned for another season.

"We have a highly motivated team, one that is a real joy to coach," Cox said. "As soon as this year's topic of debate was announced in July, four of our debaters rented apartments in Chapel Hill so they could spend the rest of the summer researching."

A federal prison in Washington, D.C., has invited the team to come to the institution in the spring. The UNC group will take on prison debate teams on subjects relating to the nation's penal system.

The Carolina debate team's tournament schedule through mid-October is: University of Pittsburgh, September 26-30; Middle Tennessee State University, October 1-2; and University of Kentucky and MIT, October 4-5.

UNC is sponsoring a home tournament on October 15-17 which more than 50 colleges and universities are expected to attend.

Light up.

CLOSE COVER BEFORE STRIKING

This fall, when you and Sally Torque go to the big game with Purvis U., take along a copy of the October issue of the National Lampoon. For the 75 cents you would have spent on a football program to find out that Billy Gleson, tight end for the Purveyors, hails from Mofongo, Indiana, and majors in port construction, you'll have something to do during half time when the Asher B. Durand High School Large Drum and Aimless Marching Corps slides into John Philip Sousa's "Bataan Death March" for the fourth time. You'll be reading a fifteen-page Mad parody; "125th Street," the educational TV show where those adorable Muthas, Big Rat and the Cocaine Monster, teach ghetto children their place; "Magical Misery Tour," which records the Beatles' trip to a land where all you need is a lawyer; "The Final Seconds," a gridiron gripper starring those inseparable chums, Moose Nixon and Ruff Mitchell; and "Right On!," the same campus war game played for years in army think tanks and radical encounter groups. And much more. The Back to School issue of the National Lampoon is on sale at newsstands everywhere.
