

Frosh debaters reach semifinals in MTSU tourney

by Pam Phillips
Staff Writer

Freshman debaters Charlie Bond and Tom Dillard got to the Middle Tennessee State University Debate Tournament semifinals last weekend, before they were defeated by the University of Alabama.

Bond and Dillard emerged from preliminary rounds with a 5-1 record. In elimination rounds, they defeated the University of Tennessee in the octo-finals and Toledo in the quarter-finals.

The Alabama team, coached by former UNC debate coach E.C. Clark, won the tournament.

Another team, freshman Cole Campbell and sophomore Kay Kernodie, came out of the pre-elimination rounds 3-3 and did not qualify for the elimination rounds.

Miss Kernodie was named seventh speaker of the tournament.

Coach Robert Cox was pleased with the performance of his freshmen teams.

"These were freshmen debaters at their first tournament," he said. "This was a varsity tournament. For them to qualify in itself is phenomenal. I expect a great deal from them."

This year Cox is assisted by two graduate assistants, Tim Heinz and Harriet Cherberg. Heinz works mainly with the freshmen debaters and Miss Cherberg with the public series of debate now sponsored by the team.

Heinz said, "I think all the participants did an outstanding job. They are off to a fine start."

Experienced debaters Joe Loveland and Joe McGuire displayed their technique before a Pittsburgh audience during the public series sponsored by the University of Pittsburgh last weekend.

The public series is an annual event in the Pittsburgh area. The University invites five of the outstanding teams in the country to debate before high school assemblies.

Loveland said the Carolina team debated about nine times. "These debates are different from tournament debate," he said. "They are designed to please an audience and are much more comical than regular debates."

Next weekend Bond and Dillard and Brent McKnight and Hewitt Rose will go with Miss Cherberg to the University of Kentucky for a tournament.

Loveland and McGuire will accompany Cox and Heinz to the MIT Tournament, which they won last year. This year the tournament is not a national qualifying tournament, but is still important for the winning team.

The Tar Heel debaters will host the Tarheel Invitational Debate Tournament the weekend of Oct. 16. Fifty-five teams have already made reservations.

Bazaar set today at Y

by Lee Souther 'nd
Staff Writer

An organizational meeting for students interested in working for the YM-YWCA's eighth annual International Handicrafts Bazaar will be held at 7:30 p.m. today in the upstairs lobby of the Y Building.

Tom Gilbert and Judy Gold, co-chairmen for the bazaar, are currently making plans for the bazaar to be held Dec. 3, 4, and 5.

Seven committees will be working on various aspects of the bazaar.

"Working for the bazaar is a great way to learn about foreign cultures and sub-cultures in the United States," said Gilbert, "and this year we will need more people than in the past since the bazaar has expanded in so many directions."

Miss Gold stressed the new aspect of the coffee house and entertainment committee. "This is the first year we've been able to use Memorial Hall for continuous entertainment," she said.

"We hope to use the stage evenings for folk singers, dancers and guitarists."

Anyone interested in performing should leave their name and phone number in room 102 of the Y building.

Students who feel they do not have the time to help with the bazaar now, but would like to, should consider working on decorations or sales committees, according to the co-chairmen. The work for these groups will be centered around Dec. 3, 4, and 5.

News around campus

Antiwar group to organize tonight

The UNC Student Mobilization Committee (SMC) will hold an organizational meeting tonight to discuss plans for the opposition to the Vietnam War.

Nat London, a spokesman for the National Peace Action Committee, an affiliate of SMC, will speak on plans for Veterans Day Oct. 25, the Student Strike Nov. 3, and the Nov. 6 mass demonstrations.

The meeting will be at 7:30 p.m. in the South Lounge of the Student Union. "Our goal is to involve as many people as possible in peaceful, legal demonstrations built around immediate and total withdrawal from Southeast Asia," London said, adding:

"Many people are against the war but don't know what to do. The most effective way is mass demonstrations."

He said Nov. 6 will climax the fall campaign of anti-war activities with demonstrations in 16 U.S. cities.

London said that "in no way has the Nixon administration shown any intention of stopping the war. They play the war in low key to cool people down so that the opposition will be less committed."

Anyone interested in planning activities for the UNC campus for these events should go to the Wednesday meeting or contact John Hutton, 317 Craige Dormitory.

Group collects reusable paper

A public interest group in the Research Triangle area has announced the formation of a "paper pool" to provide reusable typing and mimeograph paper for the group.

Peter Burke, an English graduate student and spokesman for the group, said the clean side of used paper will be used in the group's office. Plans may also be made to recycle paper, he said.

Six UNC departments and offices have agreed to collect reusable paper, Burke said. He said members of the paper recycling committee will contact other departments and offices to establish boxes in central locations for the collection of the paper.

The paper will be collected weekly on Fridays.

Burke urged secretaries and other interested persons to cooperate in the project.

2nd lecture set in science series

Dr. Jonathan Beckwith, who received worldwide publicity last year for the first reported isolation of a "gene," will present the second lecture in the University School of Medicine's 1971 Medical Science Lecture Series at 4 p.m. in the Clinic Auditorium.

Beckwith, chairman of the Bacteriology Department, Harvard Medical School, will discuss "Gene Expression and Regulation In Vitro."

Next week, Dr. Charles C. Richardson, professor of biological chemistry at Harvard Medical School, will present "Enzymatic Mechanism in DNA Replication."

The 1971 lecture series deals with the most recent findings about how cells control the thousands of chemical reactions that must occur to keep the cells alive and active.

Education school receives grant

Dean Norton L. Beach of the UNC School of Education has announced the receipt of a $2,500 grant from the N.C. Easter Seal Society for Crippled Children and Adults.

The grant provides funds for equipment, research materials and training in the Rehabilitation Counseling Program of the School of Education. Graduate students will be able to use the new equipment and books in counseling in the program's new Rehabilitation Education and Research Unit.

This unit provides for a materials center and seminar rooms for instruction.

Other sponsors of the unit include the N.C. Vocational Rehabilitation Division of the Department of Public Instruction, the Rehabilitation Services Section of the N.C. Commission for the Blind, and the Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation Department of the School of Medicine.

Esquire quotes former student

Esquire Magazine devotes part of an article in its October issue to the story of Lee Meyrowitz, a former Vietnam veteran and recent UNC graduate.

Meyrowitz tells of the killing of an apparently innocent man in Vietnam, in the article, entitled "Lieutenant Calley's Army."

The article includes the testimony of seven former soldiers who tortured prisoners and killed civilians during the war. Its subtitle is "Following Orders In Vietnam."

Meyrowitz, a native of New Jersey, joined the Army in 1964 at the age of 18 and was assigned to Vietnam in July, 1966.

The article quotes him giving this account of an incident around Tuy Hoa:

"We were in a plain, on a hill. Our sergeant spotted a man. I won't say VC, and in black pajamas. He told us he was a VC, and in some insane moment we ran after the man, did not attempt to capture him and shot and killed him and called him in as a body count."

Meyrowitz enrolled at Temple University in 1967 and did not discuss what had happened in the war. He became a "right-wing reactionary" after attacks from radicals, he said.

He transferred to UNC and continued his silence about the war. He slowly began changing his position and, with the killings at Kent State, became an active protestor against Vietnam.

"Veterans may possibly be the revolutionary element of change in the United States," Meyrowitz said in the article. "The seeds of discontent reside within our psyches."

Meyrowitz helped organize the Vietnam Veterans Against the War on the UNC campus. He graduated in political science.

Social workers slate meeting

More than 1,000 social workers are expected to attend the annual conference of N.C. social workers Friday and Saturday at the Durham Hotel and Motel.

Survival of social work and services in these "uncertain times" and under today's pressures will be the central theme of the conference.

John Ollis, president of the N.C. Council of Social Work Chapters, a social work supervisor for Blue Ridge Mental Health Center, Asheville, said:

"Today, more than ever, the social work profession must examine the way we try to help persons in need. The social problems of the 1970s have made us stop and think. What are we doing? Where are we going? These are the questions we will examine in our conference."

The keynote address will be delivered by Dr. S.W. Byuarm, professor of sociology at Johnson C. Smith University, Charlotte, on Friday morning Oct. 8.

His topic, "You, Your Agency and Services," questions the adequacy of the social services presently available to North Carolina's residents.

Miss Heaton M. Crook, chairman of the U.S. Civil Defense Council, will speak on the importance of "State and National Planning to Meet Disasters."

Glen Allison of Washington, D.C., representing the National Association of Social Workers, will close the conference Oct. 9, with a discussion of National Social Welfare priorities, and what must be done to achieve more effective services.

A series of workshops led by outstanding social welfare experts from North Carolina will also be featured at the conference.

UNC prof works on price freeze

A UNC economics professor has been named special assistant to Undersecretary of Treasury Charles Walker to work with both the wage-price freeze and the Nixon administration's revenue sharing plan.

Professor Robert P. Strauss has been in charge of the technical evaluation of alternative revenue sharing formulas since late May. During the wage-price freeze, Strauss has been working with the exemptions and exceptions group of the Office of Emergency Preparedness to review exemption requests by firms and associations.

He represented the Treasury Department at the recent Governors' Conference in San Juan, Puerto Rico, and spoke Sept. 27 for the department at the National Tax Association Meeting in Kansas City, Mo.

Strauss began his association with the Treasury department as a Brookings Economic Policy fellow assigned to work with revenue sharing. He was one of 11 economists from throughout the country to be awarded the Brookings fellowships last year.

Math dept creates position

Dr. W. Robert Mann has been appointed to the newly established office of associate chairman of the UNC Department of Mathematics.

The office was created to function in association with that of Dr. Fred B. Wright, chairman of the department, which has had a 10 percent increase in registrations in mathematics this fall.

Mann, a native of Honea Path, S.C., graduated from the University of Rochester and received his Ph.D. degree at the University of California. He joined the UNC mathematics faculty in 1949.

In addition to his new responsibilities, he is serving as chairman of undergraduate studies in mathematics. On the graduate level most of his teaching has been in the area of applied mathematics.

The University honored Professor Mann in 1967 with the Tanner Award for Excellence in Teaching.

We want to talk to you about a career in law... without law school.

When you become a Lawyer's Assistant, you'll be doing work traditionally done by lawyers — work we think you'll find challenging and responsible. And Lawyer's Assistants are now so critically needed that The Institute for Paralegal Training can offer you a position in the city of your choice and a higher salary than you'd expect as a recent college graduate. You'll work with lawyers on interesting legal problems — and the rewards will grow as you do.

A representative of The Institute for Paralegal Training will conduct interviews on:

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 20

Inquire at Placement Office for exact location of interview

NOTE: If registration for this seminar is filled, come anyway — we'll try to talk to you. Or call us collect at the number shown below.
