

Tar Heel soccer team visits Wolfpack today

by David Zucchino
Sports Writer

When you're 3-0, 4-0 is all you can think about. There's something about being undefeated that makes you anxious to tack on that next win to the streak so you can get started on the game after that.

So it goes with Coach Marvin Allen's undefeated Carolina soccer squad. The Tar Heels have been knocking lesser teams around so far this season and they're just itching to prove themselves against first-class opposition.

UNC gets that chance today at 3:00 as the Tar Heels travel to Raleigh for a vital ACC clash with N.C. State.

The Tar Heels have mopped up thus far against outside competition. Appalachian State fell first in a 9-0 comedy, then it was Belmont Abbey by a 3-1 margin, followed last week by a convincing 3-0 shutout over William and Mary.

State will be tougher.

"State's team this season is the best that they've had in a number of years," warns Allen. "They're much better than they were last year because of the good help they've received from new players."

"We expect a tough game. It's a very important match and one that we have to win."

Carolina and State fought to a 1-1 tie last year in Chapel Hill. The Tar Heels had several to win that game, only to be foiled consistently by the efforts of Wolfpack goalie Ron Lindsey.

Tar Heel forward Dan Ariail remembers Lindsey well. "Lindsey gave us fits around the goal last year," he recalls. "He's just an excellent goalie."

An All-ACC and All-South performer last year, Lindsey is back for more honors again this season. State also returns 14 lettermen, along with six outstanding freshmen prospects.

The newcomer most eagerly awaited by coach Max Rhodes is freshman halfback Somnuck Vixaysouk, a 1970 All-Asian selection at goalie.

Rhodes claims that Vixaysouk, who kicks expertly with either foot, has "the potential to become the best all-around player" in Wolfpack history.

State, which currently stands at 2-2 after finishing 5-3-2 last season, will feature an improved scoring attack, led by center forward Eduardo Polli.

Polli, a native of Naples, Italy, has led the Wolfpack in scoring for the past two years. He has also twice been chosen second team All-Conference.

Allen will go today with the same lineup that has produced a solid 3-0 record. Ariail, Karl Muster, Kip Ward and Anson Dorrance will man the front line, with Tim Morse, John McCallie and Bill Isherwood at halfback and Arden Sterling, Van Allen and Jim Smith at fullback. Nick Jones is the goalie.

The Tar Heels have not played since Sept. 28, but Allen isn't worried about a possible letdown after the long layoff.

"We looked bad in practice Monday," he says, "but the team has played extremely well in practice since then."

Frosh booters tie Duke

Carolina's freshman soccer squad battled the Duke freshmen to a 2-2 tie yesterday afternoon in a game staged on Fetzer Field.

Forward David Gershenson scored both Tar Heel goals in the first and third periods. Vernon Grizzard assisted on Gershenson's first score.

Connecting for the Blue Imps were Doug Kiel and forward Justin Roscoe, who scored on a pass from Jesse Colvin. Roscoe was taken to the hospital later in the game when he suffered a badly cut tongue after being knocked down in a pile-up.

Saturday showdowns are potentially boring

by Al Thomas
Sports Writer

All seven Atlantic Coast Conference teams have skirmishes scheduled for this weekend, but on paper, at least, four of the five games have the potential of boring the spectators.

Nationally-ranked Duke plays winless Clemson; undefeated Carolina entertains a sluggish Tulane delegation; Virginia travels to now-independent South

Co-rec carnival

Entries are due Monday for the 24th annual Co-Recreational Carnival Thursday, Oct. 14 in Woolen Gym at 7 p.m.

Teams of men and women students will compete in relays, carnival activities and sports events.

Organizations must have at least six participants to comprise a team; four of which will participate in the relays and all of which will participate in one of the six other events.

Men's organizations may enter but one team and women's organizations may enter as many teams as desired.

Entry forms are available at the intramural office, 215 Woolen.

Pep rally

A pep rally for Saturday's Tulane game will be held in front of South Building this morning at 11:45.

All spectators at the Kenan Stadium game Saturday are encouraged by the cheerleaders to make a banner; the winning banner will receive a free keg of beer from Schlitz.

Carolina; strong Wake Forest visits winless State; and Maryland hosts Syracuse.

The oddsmakers figure only the Syracuse-Maryland game to be much of the battle.

The ACC has become famous for its upsets, however, and there is almost always one major upset. Usually there is more.

Duke has now won four games in a row, three more than the Blue Devils were predicted to win. Duke's latest triumph—a 9-3 win over Stanford—was the most impressive so far, especially since the Blue Devils did it without the services of fullback Steve Jones.

Jones, injured in a car accident last week, is still on the doubtful list for Saturday's meeting with Clemson.

Duke head coach Mike McGee does not really need the strong fullback this weekend, anyway, with the Blue Devils expected to walk away with a two to three touchdown advantage.

The Tar Heels will have revenge in mind Saturday when the Green Wave leave New Orleans for Kenan Field.

Tulane edged out the Tar Heels 24-17 last year in Sugar Bowl Stadium on the strength of a near-perfect passing attack.

This year, the Tar Heels have an improved defensive secondary, a still-solid rushing game, and the knowledge that in the last ten meetings of the two teams Carolina stands 0-8-2.

The other "top" ACC game this weekend is the Wake Forest-State meeting in Raleigh. Deacon quarterback Larry Russell has had trouble with his team's inconsistency, but even that is a lot better than being saddled with State's consistent—but poor—attack.

Harriers meet W&M, Md.

The Carolina cross country team will put its unblemished 4-0 record on the line Saturday when it travels to College Park to face William and Mary and conference foe Maryland.

Although the Heels have blitzed all of their opponents with ease, the meet this Saturday could be much closer. Both Maryland and William and Mary have strong track programs and have a reputation of fielding outstanding teams. This season should be no exception.

"They both have pretty good teams this year," said Carolina coach Joe Hilton. "It will most definitely be our toughest meet so far this season."

Carolina will go into the meet with two major question marks. The first is how well will the team perform without the services of one of their top runners, Tony Waldrop, who remains sidelined with a virus.

The second is the doubtful starting of Mike Caldwell. The sophomore, who has performed well in both meets this season, has developed a muscle strain in his leg. Coach Hilton says that Caldwell definitely wants to run but the coach is fearful that complications may arise.

Despite these two drawbacks, Coach Hilton says that the rest of the teams is in tremendous shape.

"All of the rest of the team is coming along real well," said Coach Hilton. "Our last practice was almost superb."

"If we can get ourselves whole again we should be very strong. We can't take a chance now that would ruin our chances when the conference schedule gets heavy."

Last year Maryland was thought by many to be the class of the conference when they ran up a perfect 7-0 regular season record.

In the conference meet, however, the team flopped miserably and much to the surprise of the entire conference, dropped to a distant fourth place.

The Terps have virtually the same squad that ran last year except for the team's second man, Charles Schrader, who was lost by graduation. The number one man, Russell Taintor, will be returning and will be joined by track star John Baker.

Baker ran four years for the school's outdoor track team and after losing his eligibility converted to cross country.

As strong as Maryland is expected to be, Coach Hilton thinks William and Mary has the better team of the two.

"They both have good teams," said Coach Hilton, "but I think William and Mary is a little stronger down the line."

"Their two top runners are Steve Snider and Ron Martin and both are top flight runners. Martin made it to the top 25 in the NCAA in Cross Country last season."
