

Concerned athletes to issue statement

By Howie Carr
Assistant Sports Editor

In the wake of a statement issued Monday night by the UNC football team supporting the University football program, the Committee of Concerned Athletes plans to release a new statement today at 4 p.m. in the Student Union.

"We'll discuss aspects of the players' statement and just what we're trying to do," said Bill Richardson, chairman of the group of former UNC football players. "We'll also include a restatement of our goals and maybe some new testimony."

The statement by the football team, which was released late Monday night, read:

"We, the members of the current University of North Carolina varsity football team wish to state publicly our support of the football program at the University.

"At the same time, we recognize there are problems in any college football program and we are confident that our problems are in the process of being solved from within our present program."

George Simpson, a junior offensive tackle from Lexington, Virginia, who released the statement, said "the team just felt like we wanted to give the coaches a vote of confidence."

"We wanted to say that we felt the problems could be worked out within the system and that we didn't need any outside help," he said.

Simpson declined to elaborate on what he meant by "outside help."

The meeting, held Monday night in Ehringhaus dormitory, was called by linebacker John Bunting, one of the 17 seniors who share the captaincy of the UNC team this season. Simpson said "as far as I know," every team member was present at the meeting.

Simpson said after an "open discussion" the statement was drawn up by a committee composed of himself, senior defensive end Bill Brafford and about 10 others.

The entire team voted on whether to accept the wording of the statement, Simpson said. He said a separate vote was held on each of the two sentences.

Asked if there were any dissenting votes, Simpson replied, "Not that I know of."

The football team's statement was apparently issued in answer to the 22-page statement issued Sunday by the Committee of Concerned Athletes, which attacked the Faculty Council's Committee on Athletics' report on the death of UNC football player Billy Arnold.

Arnold died September 21 after suffering a heat stroke during a practice September 6.

UNC stops dog shelter erection

The Chapel Hill Board of Aldermen learned Monday the University will not allow the town to construct a temporary dog shelter at the Mason Farm sewer treatment plant.

The aldermen had voted Oct. 4 to build the facility when they authorized Gus Shoffner, the town's new dog warden, to capture and impound dogs.

The aldermen received a letter Monday from John L. Temple, assistant vice-chancellor for business, informing them of the University's disapproval.

The aldermen directed Shoffner to locate a site which the town could either lease or buy for use as a dog pound.

In the letter, Temple cited several reasons for the University's disapproval. "It would appear to us that the establishment of a dog pound at the proposed location would be in violation of the Chapel Hill zoning ordinances. The University does not desire to have additional traffic flowing across Finley Golf Course onto the sewage treatment site.

"The University has not been provided by the town of Chapel Hill with any specifics concerning the proposed dog pound," he said.

Temple also pointed out the University had been forced to locate its dog facility about 10 miles outside of Chapel Hill in an isolated area because of zoning restrictions and residents' opposition.

"We cannot justify in our minds now allowing the town of Chapel Hill to establish a dog pound on University property within the town limits of Chapel Hill when the University did not choose to use this same property for an animal holding facility for its own use," Temple added.

The property in question is jointly owned by the University and the town of Chapel Hill. The University transferred a one-half undivided interest in the property to the town in 1949.

According to Shoffner and the Animal Protection Society, the Orange County pound is an unacceptable facility for town use.

Alderman Ross Scroggs thought "the town should buy land, zone it and be done with it or it will be forced to adopt an ordinance giving property owners immunity to destroy any dogs creating nuisances on their property."

Shoffner then reported on his recommendations for an effective dog control plan.

The warden said he will hold a licensed dog for five days for pick-up by its owner and an additional three days for the owner to claim it and three days for adoption.

Sick or injured dogs would be destroyed unless the owner agrees to pay for veterinary treatment.

The aldermen also heard an informal presentation by University officials concerning the growth of the electric system in Chapel Hill.

The town's utility services are supplied by the University Service Plant.

Temple and Allan Waters, a representative from the plant, told the aldermen the town faces "a critical power problem."

Waters said the University hopes to locate a new substation by 1972 in the area of the Kroger Family Center and Eastgate Shopping Center, although the University does not presently own land in that area.

Waters reported the present maximum power is 72,500 kva. The 1971 level of use has reached 58,000 kva and in 1972 is expected to reach 75,000 kva.

The utility official thought expansion of the one substation would be economically unfeasible. A new substation is not expected to result in a price increase to customers.

Alderman R.D. Smith said he hoped this informational presentation by UNC staff is the beginning of the University and the town working together to solve problems in the community generated by both of them.

Group to protest Nixon

A group of UNC students will go to Charlotte Friday to protest President Richard Nixon's visit to a Billy Graham Crusade.

Nixon will speak at 1:30 p.m. Friday at the Charlotte Coliseum.

Chris Coates and Jim Kelly, both UNC students who have organized "the students to greet Nixon", said groups of people from Charlotte, Greensboro and Fayetteville will attend also.

A meeting for those interested in making the trip will be held at 8 p.m. in the Student Union. The room number will be posted at the Union information desk.

"This is a golden opportunity for people from North Carolina to express their opposition to Nixon's Indo-China war policy, his wage and price control, his continuing failure to relate to the needs of black Americans, and his administration's repression of political dissent," Coates said.
