Public hearing slated to argue welfare reform

Present and proposed welfare regulations will be discussed at a public hearing at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday in the meeting room of the Municipal Building, 306 North Columbia Street.

The meeting will focus on the provisions of President Nixon's welfare bill soon to be considered in Congress.

A number of state and local public figures and welfare recipients have been invited to appear at the meeting.

Mrs. Matrina Powell, co-chairman of the hearing, said she hopes the meeting will attract a large number of community people.

"The issues to be discussed are of great importance both to those in need of public assistance, as well as to the general population," she said.

Mrs. Powell criticized the reform bill for failing to make provisions for the rights of citizens.

"There is no requirement in the proposed bill that hearings be held before benefits are reduced or completely taken away," she said. "This provision ignores the March, 1970, Supreme Court decision (Goldberg v. Kelly) holding that prior hearings must be held."

The welfare bill places numerous restrictions on those who may represent welfare recipients at hearings. These restrictions contrast to the provisions of the Social Security Act of 1967 which supports the right of recipients to a completely free choice of representatives.

Mrs. Priscilla Byrd, a welfare recipient who has gone through the hearing process, said she thinks the restrictions on representation will be against the recipients' best interests.

She cited the contributions of lay advocates who have worked without charge to help welfare recipients present their cases.

"At the present time, there are many difficulties with the appeals system including the cutting off of funds before a hearing," Mrs. Byrd said.

"To me, the future looks even less hopeful with the appeals provisions of the President's Welfare Bill," she added.

The November 10 hearing will consider appeals provisions as well as other regulations of the welfare reform bill.

Capps gives mums away, loses $1,800

"Contrary to Tuesday's cartoon in The Daily Tar Heel, there will be no Thanksgiving mum sale," Senior Class President Lee Hood Capps said Thursday.

The last of the 5,000 mums the senior class bought for the Homecoming sale were given away Wednesday to patients at the Chapel Hill Nursing Home, delegates at the N.C. Student Legislature Interim Council meeting at Guilford College, N.C. Memorial Hospital patients and women of the University Methodist Church. "Sunday we were 'mummed out,' and I began a humanitarian drive to channel the mums in the manner that would be most appreciated," Capps said.

He said the senior class has managed to sell additional mums since homecoming to reduce the final debt to $1,800 after facing a potential debt of $4,500.

Mum sales on Franklin Street netted $500, and an additional $100 was taken in from the sale at the Clemson football game. Panhellenic and senior class members sold the mums.

Proceeds from the sale were to go to the Molly Nicholson Memorial Scholarship. Capps said, "The senior class and other organizations will sponsor drives in the immediate future so that the scholarship will not be deprived."

Mums were distributed at the University Methodist Church in memoriam of Molly Nicholson, a former University student and member of the church, who was killed in an automobile accident two days before graduation in 1969.

The scholarship was created in her memory by the Class of 1969. It is awarded on the basis of need and potential, especially among minorities.

Sen. McGovern diversified says wife

by Sarah Gross Staff Writer

Mrs. George S. McGovern said here Tuesday night her husband is not a "one-issue man" although he has "never deviated in his opposition to the Vietnam War."

"The senator simply feels the war must end before many of our other problems can be solved," she told a group of about 30 McGovern supporters at the Purefoy Road Community Church. "He feels the people of Vietnam should solve their own political problems."

She described McGovern as a man of great breadth with an interest in all of the problems of society. "His chief qualification is his faith — in his supporters, in his country and in himself," she said.

"My husband breathes, eats, sleeps and lives the problems of this country," she said. "He could not live happily without the knowledge that he was giving all of himself."

McGovern staff member Kirby Jones talked about the success of the McGovern campaign after Mrs. McGovern's speech.

"We have the best organized political campaign in the country at this point,"

he said. "Senator McGovern is going into this presidential race to win."

Jones said, "We are not trying to get the support of governors and legislators. We could have the support of almost any governor if we wanted it. However, we are starting this campaign from the ground up."

He stressed the Senator's desire to serve as President. "We will not hesitate to make deals with (Chicago) Mayor Richard Daley or other political leaders in order to win this election," he said. "By deals, I don't mean we will trade government positions for delegate votes."

"Rather, I mean we will not run our own slates of delegates against those of Daley, Gilligan and other leaders. By this tough approach, we hope to have more delegates at the convention."

He said the National Committee of the Democratic party could not be trusted. "The National Committee gave us a bad deal in '68 and we will have to watch them closely to see that they don't do it again," Jones said.

Jones concluded his speech with a plea for solidarity. "Two thousand McGovern supporters working completely for McGovern can beat 120,000 Muskie supporters," he said.
