News in brief

Foreign students need holiday home

When all the American students on the Chapel Hill campus have left for home during Thanksgiving break, the foreign students on campus have no place to go.

The International Student Center (ISC) is trying to change that Gehard Konig is heading an effort sponsored by the ISC to have American students take foreign students home with them for the Thanksgiving holidays, "While the American students are home during the holidays with all the festivities, the foreign students have had to stay here," he said.

Konig has posted sign-up sheets all over campus for American students interested in the program.

American students who would like to take a foreign student home for the vacation should contact Konig at 210 Carr Dormitory or the ISC office on the first floor of Carr by Monday, Nov. 22.

N.C. legislator to speak here

State Rep. John Ingram (D-Randolph) tentative candidate for state insurance commissioner, will speak at 7:30 p.m. today at the Student Union.

Ingram will talk on ways to extend involvement of young persons in politics, going beyond voting to electing their own candidates and getting their own issues passed.

The speech is sponsored by UNC ratify the constitutional amendment allowing 18- to 21-year-olds the right to vote. He was the also one of the prime sponsors of the absentee ballot for the state primary and a strong proponent of no-fault insurance.

"He sponsored unsuccessful legislation to abolish the discriminatory provisions of the current state automobile insurance laws against males under 25," said Roger Foushee, Orange County Democratic party chairman.

A 42-year-old practicing attorney from Asheboro, Ingram is the only Democrat to represent Randolph County in the last 10 years, according to Foushee.

Ingram is being considered as a candidate for state insurance commissioner, a post currently held by former UNC Director of Student Aid

Students interested in helping ingram in his campaign should come to the meeting tonight.

Interested students are also invited to a "dutch" reception for Ingram at The Pines Restaurant on the Raleigh Road at 5:30 p.m. today. The reception is sponsored by the Orange County Democrats.

"This is not an endorsement," said Foushee. "We plan to hold receptions for any potential candidates who visit in the county."

Freeze hits... parking tickets?

Campus police do have a reason for do have some left from the first shift of standing around nervously watching cars while in and out of the Student Union parking lot without checking parking tickets stickets.

They have practically exhausted their supply of tickets used for parking violations.

"I don't know how many we have left, but it's certainly not enough," said Capt. E.B. Rigsbee of the campus police. "We on-duty officers, and we'll probably have to borrow theirs," Riggsbee said the policemen started running out of tickets last Thursday or Friday and had hoped that the new shipment would be in this week. "But they haven't come in yet," he said. "I just don't know what to do," Riggsbee said.

A shipment of 22,000 tickets were ordered by the police and they were to have arrived today. Rigsbee said he does not know when to expect the tickets now.

Riggsbee expressed fear that if such information were made public, there might be widespread violation of parking zones on campus.

But he sayed there is nothing more he can do until the new tickets arrive.
