

Varsity cheerleaders to sell Tar Heel flags

by Charles Jeffries
Staff Writer

The UNC Varsity Cheerleaders will be selling Tar Heel flags at the last three home basketball games to help raise money to send economically deprived children to a camp this summer.

The effort by the cheerleaders to raise money for sending 135 needy children is

According to Sessions, assistant home economics extension agent for Orange County, the idea of having a camping week for the deprived children in Orange only one of several plans that two members of the Orange County Department of Social Services, Janet Sessions and Deanna Myers, are making to raise the $4,000 needed to place the kids in camp for the week of July 17-22.

County has been tossed around since October.

"We're determined to get these kids to camp," she said recently. "We're very enthusiastic about it, but enthusiasm won't get them to camp."

Already more than $1,600 has been either donated or pledged. Much of the money has been contributed by dorm residents and some support has been given by the Campus Chest.

The rest of the money will be gotten in part from the sale of Tar Heel flags at the Georgia Tech, Virginia and Duke basketball games, the last home games of the season.

Tracy Warren, a varsity cheerleader, said the flags will be sold outside Carmichael Auditorium during both the freshman and varsity games. The cost of the flags is $1.

Deanna Myers, superintendent of family and child services for Orange County, hopes the program will be an annual one that may be added to the Community Chest and the United Fund organizations that are entitled to funds.

One of the main problems now confronting the women in their attempt to send the kids to camp is transportation.

"We would like to be able to get some buses and some volunteer drivers," Myers said. "If we get the buses, we'll pay for mileage, insurance and other expenses."

The camp will host children from 8 to 16 years of age. Volunteers are needed for counselors and other staff positions at the proposed camp.

If anyone is interested in helping to send these kids to camp, he should phone Myers at 942-7200 or Sessions at 929-5121 after 6 p.m.

Posters law enacted

by Charles Jeffries
Staff Writer

A resolution to limit to one the number of campaign posters on each floor for each candidate, regardless of office, was passed Thursday night by the Morrison College Senate.

The resolution, which is not retroactive, will go into effect immediately and will apply only to those posters which might be posted after Thursday's meeting.

According to Joe Grier, governor of Morrison, those candidates who have more than one poster per floor will be asked that they remove the excess posters to comply with the rule. If any candidate refuses to comply by Feb. 21, his name will appear on a list of offenders to be posted on the Morrison bulletin board in the main lobby.

The original resolution, requested by Grier and submitted to the senate by Clark Riley, ex-speaker pro tem of the senate, stated that those posters found to be in excess of the number requested by the Morrison senate would be removed by the officials on each floor.

This rule was changed though, shortly after Larry Eggert, chairman of the elections board, informed the Morrison officials the removal of such posters by anyone other than the candidates or their representatives was a violation of the student election laws.

Eggert said he felt it should be the duty of the candidate to see that his posters complied with the resolution.

The original resolution stated that the reason for the introduction of the rule was because the posters had "created an unsightly and ecologically unsound situation."

Many of the Morrison residents favored the resolution because "they were tired of being stared at by a bunch of politicians constantly."

As one resident put it, "how can a voter make a sound decision if he cannot find the elevator because of all the posters."

Lee supporters slate meeting

"Students for Howard Lee," an organization working to elect the Chapel Hill mayor to Congress from the Second Congressional District, will hold a meeting Monday night at 8 in 111 Murphey Hall.

Judy Dixon, temporary chairman of the organization, urges all students who wish to help in the campaign to attend the meeting.

Sex counseling expands

The Human Sexuality Information and Counseling Service will begin operating on a new schedule this week, according to its director, Robert Wilson.

New hours for the service are 11 a.m. - 10 p.m., Monday-Friday in Suite C. Wilson said the service will also be available on certain weekend hours as yet undecided.

In addition, an answering service will also be in operation on weekends.

Wilson said the hours of the service are being extended to meet the student demand. The service has been averaging 50-60 cases per week, he said. Since the service began October 18, it has handled 650 cases.

The Human Sexuality Information and Counseling Service consists of 38 counselors, half male, half female. It also has recourse to the services of seven physicians, one of which is a gynecologist and one a psychologist.

Wilson said the basic role of the service is to work on any problem or question dealing with any aspect of one's sexuality.

The number of the Service is 933-5505.
