

Board's position restated in letter to assemblymen

by Janet Langston
Staff Writer

A letter sent to all General Assembly members by UNC Board of Governors chairman William A. Dees Jr. restated for the record the board's position on medical education.

Dees said he wrote the letter to stem widespread allegations of the board's "institutional partisanship" in medical education. If such an evaluation were made by the Assembly and the public, Dees said, the board would not be able to carry out its statutory obligations and duties.

The action is Dees' first since he was authorized by the board two weeks ago to set before N.C. legislators, citizens and press the "findings and conclusions" on medical education by the Board of Governors.

Charges by ECU proponents claim that the board was biased against ECU when submitting its 1974-1975 budget requests to the N.C. Budget Advisory Commission. The requests did not appropriate any money for ECU capital construction, but did ask money for clinical education facilities in Greenville.

The Board opposes the immediate expansion of a two- or four-year medical school at East Carolina, based on recommendations by a panel of medical consultants hired by the Board.

The panel was directed by the board to make a comprehensive study of medical education, health delivery and future health care needs in North Carolina.

Dees defended the board's selection of the panel in the letter. He said that of the six consultants finally chosen for the panel, three of these were recommended by the ECU officials, and one was selected by a Greenville physician.

When the list of medical consultants was decided, Dees continued, "I asked ECU representatives if they had objections to any of the proposed members. They had none.

"Not until the panel had reported was any question raised as to its (the panel's) competence," Dees noted.

The panel recommended that expansion at ECU be delayed until the current program is strengthened. It also suggested that a specific planning study be conducted with a $50,000 state appropriation to determine the feasibility of a medical school at Greenville.

Denying reports that the panel's report slighted ECU purposefully, Dees said that "the panel of consultants pointed out that the further expansion of undergraduate medical education could not be accomplished, whether through the existing medical schools or the creation of a new school, until additional clinical education facilities had been provided."

The board plans to achieve this through the Area Health Education Centers (AHEC).

Dees recognized that a decision by the General Assembly could overturn any judgment of the Board of Governors, but said that "unless the board is given authority and support commensurate with its responsibility, it cannot meet its fundamental obligations to the General Assembly and the state."

Sundays are supposed to be days of rest, and for many people, it's a trifle hard to find the time or place to relax. This tired young man managed to find a few moments for respite crammed in between all the other necessities of another day.

Park dedicated Sunday at Community Church

Chapel Hill opened its fourth recreational park in a dedication ceremony held at the Chapel Hill Community Church on Sunday.

The Charles Jones Community Park is located between the church and Pittsboro Road. Rev. James Riddle, Community Church minister, said the 10-acre site was chosen because of its size and proximity to the University and town. Riddle said the area was also chosen because of its availability for recreational use.

Two development plans have been drawn up for recreational facilities for all ages. The plans differ mainly in the number of parking spaces and tennis and basketball courts to be constructed.

Gary Giles park planning consultant, said the plans are tentative at this point and that a tremendous amount of work must still be done.

When finalized, the plans will go before the Recreation Department for approval and if passed, to the Board of Aldermen to be voted on.

The land, purchased by Chapel Hill from the church, was named for Charles Jones, a former minister of the church and community leader. He was active in church services, labor disputes, social causes and racial problems.

Other parks in Chapel Hill include Ephesus, Cedar, and Umstead.

Group aids farm union

A group supporting the activities of the United Farm Workers Union (UFW) has been formed by workers in the Chapel Hill Peace Center.

Friends of the United Farm Workers (FUFW) will carry on educational activities centered around the California lettuce and grape boycott. The group will hold a public meeting Jan. 30 to discuss the strike and plan for future activities in Chapel Hill.

The strikes in California began more than a year ago when the UFW contracts with the growers expired. The growers announced that they were signing contracts with the Teamsters Union rather than bargain with the union the workers had chosen to represent them, according to a FUFW information sheet.

According to the UFW, the growers have resisted suggestions that elections be held to decide which union the growers want to represent them.

The UFW has called for a boycott of non-UFW lettuce, grapes, and wine made from the grapes.

School gets award

The Reader's Digest Foundation has awarded $1,000 to the UNC School of Journalism for student travel and research expenses.

The 1974 award was doubled in amount from previous awards because of student accomplishments under past grants. Dr. John B. Adams, dean of the journalism school, said.

In 1972-73, the grant funded story research, paid field trip expenses for several journalism classes and covered travel expenses for 16 students to attend professional meetings.

News in brief

Snodgrass quits GPSF

Bill Snodgrass resigned as president of the Graduate Professional Student Federation (GPSF) during a Senate meeting Thursday night.

Snodgrass, a fifth year graduate student in the Department of Environmental Engineering, told the GPSF Senate that his resignation was prompted by the need to work on his graduate thesis and by an upcoming trip to California.

Serving as president for one year, Snodgrass was one of the original members of the GPSF and has served on various faculty and student committees.

In other business, several graduate students from Craig dorm voiced their continued dissatisfaction with the University's handling of their housing situation.

The group will draw up a formal list of complaints this month and present them to University Housing Director James Condie.

A group spokesman said they were upset because the introduction of growing numbers of undergraduates threatened the graduate nature of the dorm.

The Campus Governing Council's

The Department of Politics of the School of Liberal Arts at N.C. State University will present a public symposium on the "President and Congress in the 70's". Lectures will be held during the next three months in the ballroom of the State student union at 8 p.m. with receptions following each speech.

The following is a list of the topics and speakers that have scheduled to date:

- Jan. 21—"Presidential Accountability: The Politics of Watergate" by Nelson W. Polsby, professor of political science at the University of California at Berkeley;
- Jan. 28—"Executive Privilege: Constitutional Myth" by Raoul Berger, Charles Warren Senior Fellow in American Legal History at Harvard;
- Feb. 4—"The Reasonable Case for Executive Privilege" by Dean Roger C. Cramton of the Cornell University Law School;
- Feb. 25—"Impoundment: A Legislative Point of View" by Sen. Sam J. Ervin Jr.;
- March 13—"Impoundment: The Executive Point of View" by Stanley Ebner, general counsel of the Office of Management and Budget;
- March 18—"The War Powers Act: A Critical Analysis" by Texas Congressman Robert Eckhardt;
- March 25—"The War Powers Act: A Favorable Analysis" by Donald M. Fraser, Minnesota congressman.
- April 8—"Reforming Congress to Restore Congressional Authority" by Missouri Congressman Richard Bolling;
- April (tentative)—"President and Congress: Cooperation as Well as Conflict" by Bryce Harlow, counselor to President Nixon.

Judicial Committee is currently considering an amendment to the pending Judicial Reform document that would remove drug offenses from student court jurisdiction. The amendment was introduced by Snodgrass.

Dan Rather to talk

Dan Rather, White House correspondent for CBS Television, will speak Tuesday night at Duke University.

Rather will talk on "A Reporter's Perspective: The Shaping of Reality by Television Network News" beginning at 8:15 p.m. in Page Auditorium.

Rather's talk is open to the public without charge.

Student hit by car

A UNC student was injured early Saturday morning when he was struck by a car at the corner of Raleigh St. and Cameron Ave.

Verne L. Hunt of 108 Stacy was treated and released from North Carolina Memorial Hospital after being hit at 12:48 a.m. Saturday by a car operated by Richard Eugene Witt, 157 Eringhaus.

The Chapel Hill Police department reported that no charges have been filed in the accident.
