News briefs

Tanner ballots out soon

Each year the University presents eight awards to fulltime members of its faculty for excellence in undergraduate teaching.

The Tanner Awards and the AMOCO Foundation Good Teaching Awards carry stipends of $1000 each.

The Nicolas Salgo Distinguished Teacher Award carries a prize of $1500.

Dr. Joel J. Schwartz, chairman of the Student-Faculty Committee on Distinguished Teaching Awards, said Wednesday he hopes for a large expression of student opinion.

"We will write letters to all professors who get a substantial number of ballots," he said, "just to let them know some of their students care."

Nominating ballots for the eight University distinguished teaching awards will be available starting Monday through March 3.

Nominations for the teaching awards can be made by any undergraduate student and any full-time faculty member.

Ballots will be available in the following locations: the undergraduate library, the Union, Chase Cafeteria, the YMCA, the Health Sciences Library and South Building information desk.

License plate deadline soon

Midnight Monday is the deadline for getting 1975 North Carolina license plates for your car. After that, motorists with 1974 plates face a maximum $50 fine.

In Orange County, plates may be picked up at the Triangle Tire Company, on W. Main Street in Carrboro. The license fee this year is $14, plus a $1 city tax, and must be paid in cash.

Valentine's Day parade is today

Kids of all ages drag out your Valentine costumes, drape streamers on your 10-speeds and boogie down to Franklin Street today.

It's the 4th annual Chi Psi Valentine's Day Parade. The parade will congregate by Silent Sam at 3:45 p.m.

The Kalamazoo Kazoo Band will usher all cupids down Franklin Street, up Mallett Street and into the Chi Psi Lodge for a Valentine bash.

Nothing is worse than soggy Valentine's costumes, so if it rains the parade will be Saturday at 11 a.m.

Chaplain to be installed today

The Rev. Thomas B. Woodard will be installed as the UNC Episcopal chaplain at noon today during a service and ceremony in the Pit.

The Rt. Rev. Moultrie Moore, suffragan bishop of North Carolina, will lead the service, aided by UNC students, faculty members and chaplains.

A native of Kansas, Woodard previously served as a chaplain at the University of Rochester, Central Missouri State University and the University of Kansas.

Diagnosis really only six weeks

The waiting period for diagnosis of gonorrhea is six weeks, not six months as reported in a Wednesday article on rape.

Yack buyers may win big

Anyone who purchases a Yackety Yack before 5 p.m. on Friday, Feb. 21, will be eligible to win a student section ticket to the N.C. State basketball game in Carmichael Auditorium on Feb. 25.

Yackety Yacks, $8, may be purchased from 1-5 p.m. weekdays in Suite D of the Union. The winner will be announced at 5 p.m., Feb. 21.

Lake to open at noon Sunday

University Lake will open for boating on Sunday this year, instead of the usual March 1 opening date.

Lake Warden Lester Foley said Thursday that rentals will start at noon Sunday. Hours for the lake are: Tuesday through Saturday, 8:00 a.m. to sundown; Sunday, noon to sundown; and Monday, closed.

Carrboro bus vote pushed

by George Bacso Staff Writer

A vast majority of Carrboro residents favor the holding of a new public transportation referendum, a survey coordinated by members of the UNC Biostatistics Department shows.

Harriet Imrey, Carrboro Public Transportation Commission chairman, was to present the results of the survey to the Carrboro Board of Aldermen Tuesday night in an effort to schedule a referendum this spring before students leave town for the summer.

For the first time in Mayor Robert Wells' four years in office, however, the board failed to reach a quorum as only half its members showed up. The survey results will thus be presented Monday night at a special board meeting.

A referendum to establish a bus system was narrowly defeated in May, 1973, but the election was held after many students already had left school. The study also shows that Carrboro's population has changed significantly since then.

The survey estimates 87.5 per cent of all Carrboro residents favor the holding of such a referendum and indicates whether the resident is affiliated with UNC as a student, faculty or staff member made little difference in his support of public transportation.

Ninety-three per cent of all UNC students and 83 per cent of all UNC faculty and personnel residing in Carrboro want a referendum called, whereas 83 per cent of all other residents favor a referendum.

Race and type of residence also made slight differences in an individual's response: 87 per cent of whites favor having a referendum, as do 82 per cent of black respondents. Although apartment dwellers are strongly in favor of public transportation with 93 per cent, the corresponding percentage among residents living in single-family homes is 78 per cent.

Calling the study multi-faceted, study coordinator Dr. Mildred Francis said it revealed several recent changes in Carrboro's population. The survey found that UNC faculty and staff members comprise 17 per cent of Carrboro's total population; students, 42 per cent; and others, 40 per cent.

Carrboro's population has almost doubled since the May 1973 referendum was defeated, the survey found.

Of all eligible Carrboro voters, only 36 per cent are registered to vote. Of these, 76 per cent are in favor of holding a referendum. In addition, 74 per cent of those persons not currently registered indicated that the possibility of being able to vote on a public transportation referendum would persuade them to register immediately.

Imrey warned that the board must take swift action in applying for a referendum if they decide to do so. State statutes require that a town wait at least 50 days after calling a special election for the actual election date.

Imrey said the town must move quickly so the election can be held before students go home for the summer.
