

Reports place agents in danger — CIA head

by Clay F. Richards
United Press International

WASHINGTON — CIA Director William Colby said Thursday the almost hysterical excitement surrounding news reports his agency spied illegally on Americans was endangering the lives of undercover agents overseas.

Colby said that legitimate American spying operations are threatened by false charges that his agency engaged in massive domestic intelligence.

"The almost hysterical excitement that surrounds any news story mentioning CIA... has raised the question whether secret intelligence operations can be conducted by the United States," Colby said. "A number of our individual agents abroad are deeply worried that their names might be revealed with resultant danger to their lives."

Strongly defending his beleaguered agency, Colby said missteps were few and far between and did not justify the outcry raised by news reports.

He said almost hysterical excitement surrounding news stories about CIA spying has raised questions whether secret intelligence operations can be conducted by the United States.

The CIA is being investigated by a special presidential commission headed by Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller. In addition, special House and Senate committees have been created to investigate the agency.

In testimony prepared for the defense subcommittee of the House Appropriations Committee, Colby was particularly critical of the New York Times, which on Dec. 22 printed the first story of domestic spying. He said reporter Seymour M. Hersh mixed and magnified two separate subjects — legal activities and those few activities that may have been illegal.

Aid asked for NCCU law school

United Press International

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. — The president of the University of North Carolina says he will include $2.5 million for the North Carolina Central University law school in a supplemental budget request.

William C. Friday announced the request Wednesday after the law school received a warning from the American Bar Association that it has until June 1 to improve its facilities and upgrade its curriculum.

According to Friday, the ABA's council of the section of legal education and admissions to the bar wants proof that a program to improve the school has been designed, not just promises of improvement.

WASHINGTON — President Ford indicated Thursday he was ready to fight congressional opposition to his oil import fee increase and at the same time showed a willingness to compromise to get a national energy crisis program enacted.

Ford said Wednesday night he will veto a congressional measure to suspend for 90 days his $3-a-barrel fee hike, despite indications Congress might override him.

"The President is hopeful his veto will be sustained," Press Secretary Ron Nessen told reporters. "The President is sticking to his oil tariff increase."

Nessen refused to predict how Congress might vote, but Senate Republican Leader Hugh Scott said there was rather a good chance the Senate would sustain Ford's veto.

Nessen stressed that Ford intended the $3 a barrel fee hike not as an energy program, but as a stop-gap measure to give Congress time to enact a program for restoring U.S. energy independence.

He spelled out four principles Ford demands for the national energy program and said, significantly, the details are negotiable as long as the four goals are observed.

Nessen said the principles were inviolable and Ford will not compromise on these goals. They are:

- The program must make America independent of foreign fuel supplies by 1985.
- The program must encourage development of more domestic fuel supplies to replace Arab oil and other foreign supplies.

- The energy program must be equitable to all Americans, in all regions, in all industries.
- It must include permanent income tax cuts for individuals and for business, most vitaly for persons in low and middle income brackets "to make up for the ravages of inflation" and higher fuel costs.

Nessen came under heavy questioning by reporters trying to learn where Ford might compromise to win on the import fee issue. Nessen did not rule out compromise but said Ford was sticking by his executive order raising the fees by April 1.

White House sources said for Nessen to discuss the possibility of compromise on the tariff hike would rob the President of any bargaining power he could use in getting congressmen to sustain a veto.

Ford's strategy on energy has been to talk tough and to use the tariff hike to prod the Democratic-controlled Congress into enacting both an energy program and anti-inflation measures to his liking.

down a $2 million request for a building at the law school, listing it as No. 27 on a list of 36 higher education priorities in North Carolina.

Friday said a new building for the school is the major concern of the Bar Association.

He said the cost of constructing the building was originally estimated at $2 million, but now estimates run about $2.3 million.

The bar association council called the school's library insufficient and its building totally inadequate. The council also expressed great concern about the quality of management at the school.

Earlier this year, Rep. H.H. Michaux, D-Durham, said he would introduce a measure calling for $4.5 million to improve the school if the supplemental budget request is denied.

John N. Sanders, UNC Vice President for Planning, said both NCCU and UNC officials thought the school had already been reaccredited for the next seven years.

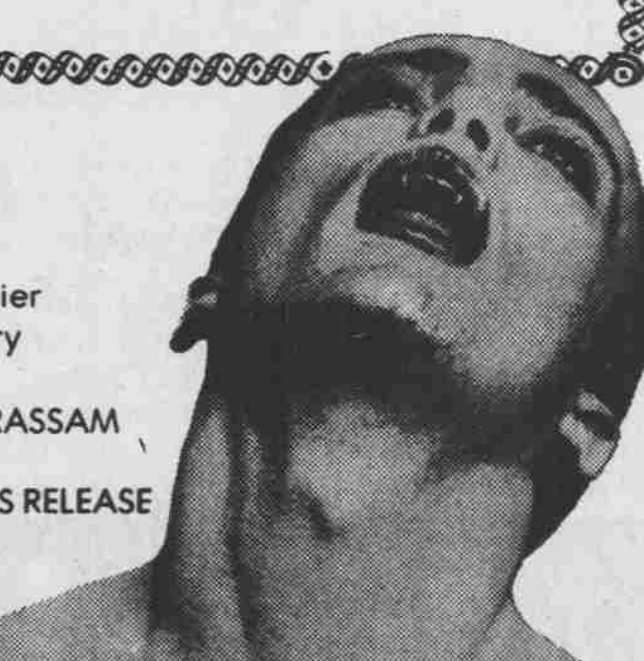

The bar association said it will hold a hearing July 1 to decide whether to withdraw the school's accreditation.

FM reception in the Chapel Hill area is really pretty bad. To receive distant stations your receiver must be of good design and working properly. To this end Soundhaus, in cooperation with Sound Technology, builders of test components used in designing professional tuners, and Yamaha Audio will conduct exhaustive tests on your component FM tuner/receiver at absolutely no charge.

Nine separate tests will tell you what to expect of your tuner and whether it currently meets specs. You will be given a chart of your tuner's performance; and a Soundhaus representative can explain how you may improve reception of your favorite stations.

This is a very special opportunity for you to gain more satisfaction from your stereo system. We ask only that you be present while your unit is tested.

Thank you.
