News briefs

CGC rejects vet's club constitution

The Campus Governing Council rejected the proposed constitution of the UNC Veteran's Club Tuesday night, with all but one of the 12 representatives present voting against the document.

Meeting for the final time during the 56th session, the council also narrowly approved creating a $10,000 emergency loan fund for the Daily Tar Heel.

Most of the objections to the Veterans' Club document centered on its membership clause, which many representatives felt was too restrictive.

Any UNC student who is either a veteran or on active duty in the U. S. Armed Forces is automatically eligible for membership. Any other student may become an honorary member if he or she receives a recommendation from any club member and is approved by a two-thirds majority of the membership.

UJA raising funds

The UNC chapter of the United Jewish Appeal (UJA) is continuing its fund-raising campaign to support Jewish social services in the United States and abroad.

The campaign, which involves distribution of UJA literature and solicitation of donations by telephone, has not been set, Mark Silver, coordinator of the drive, said. The money will be used for vitally needed social and humanitarian services; however, no money will be used for military expenses in Israel, Silver said.

Anyone wishing to participate in the campaign, or in any several "consciousness-raising" activities associated with the drive, should call Silver at 929-8894 or the Hillel Foundation at 942-4057.

Speech forms due

Applications for the prestigious Willie Person Mangum Medal in Oratory, the oldest prize awarded at UNC, are available at the Union desk and Speech Department. The competition will begin March 18-20. Deadline for applications is Friday.

A photo contest dealing with man's struggle for survival is being sponsored this month in conjunction with the Carolina Symposium. First prize is $25. All entries must be mounted and submitted with name, address and telephone number to the Union desk by Saturday, March 22.

Color or black and white photographs will be accepted. All entries will be on display in the Union during the symposium.

Joan Little supper to be held Saturday

A pot-luck supper for Joan Little will be held at 6:00 p.m. Saturday in the social room of the Community Church on Purefoy Road.

Little will be free to meet and talk with any person interested in her recent experience with the state penal system. Guests are urged to bring food.

The supper is being sponsored by the Joan Little Legal Defense Fund and other local groups.
