

Says trial unfair

Chisholm backs Little

United Press International

WASHINGTON—Rep. Shirley Chisholm, D-N.Y., declared Tuesday that Joan Little could not get a fair trial in eastern North Carolina because of the "worst sort of prejudices against black women" there.

Mrs. Chisholm asked U.S. Attorney General Edward Levi to intervene on Miss Little's behalf.

Mrs. Chisholm told reporters here:

"There are very few black people of either sex called to serve on juries on these (eastern North Carolina) counties. So this can really hurt Joan who lives in a region where many, many caucasian people hold the worst sort of prejudices against black women."

In Washington, N.C., Attorneys for the accused murderers asserted Tuesday that the method used to select the grand jury that indicted her systematically excluded blacks and poor people.

Marvin D. Miller, who played a similar role in the trial of the rebellious Attica prison inmates, told the court that tax and voting records used to form the jury pool were "insufficient."

Miller, from Alexandria, Va., argued that since blacks and the poor pay proportionately fewer taxes and votes less frequently, they appear less often on the jury lists.

To bolster his point, Miller called Mrs. Donna Cherry, who drew up the jury list from which the grand jury that indicted Miss Little was chosen, to stand to testify that she used only the tax and voter rolls.

Rebels bombard Phnom Penh in dying hours of its defense

United Press International

PHNOM PENH—Communist-led rebels bombarded Phnom Penh from two sides Tuesday. The government's best army division destroyed its own supplies and retreated five miles to try to protect the capital in the dying hours of its defense.

Military sources said the rebels were a bare 10-minute drive from the heart of the city. Collapse appeared imminent.

Khmer Rouge insurgents swept into the northwestern suburbs and hammered the eastern fringes with barrages of artillery and rock fire, touching off fires and turning residents into refugees.

A message on the UPI leased news wire between Phnom Penh and Saigon-Hong Kong at 5 a.m. EDT said: "Situation seems to be very critical and unsure there will be any more messages because of circuit break . . . SOS." Then the transmissions ended.

In Paris, a spokesman for exiled Cambodian chief of state Prince Norodom Sihanouk said Khieu Samphan, who directed the day-to-day war from the rebel side, would administer a new government once Phnom Penh fell. Sihanouk said in a radio interview he envisioned only a figurehead role for himself.

In a broadcast monitored in Saigon, the rebels said, "Phnom Penh is now on the point of collapse, and the liberation forces have liberated almost all of the country."

The government's 7th Division, rated by military experts, the country's best, abandoned its headquarters at Doem Ampil, nine miles to the north of the capital, blew up its American-provided supplies and fell back five miles to try to shore up Phnom Penh's defenses and stave off its imminent collapse.

This left Phnom Penh open to short-range mortar fire from all sides.

Field reporters said six Cambodian T28 propeller-driven fighter-bombers struck back at insurgent forces assaulting an armored personnel carrier corps headquarters five miles west of the capital. This indicated that, at least temporarily, the city's airport was in government hands.

Rebel radio broadcasts monitored in Saigon said the insurgents had seized the airport at Pochentong and a nearby radio transmitting station.

Reports reaching Saigon said 50 foreigners, including a handful of American newsmen, and Cambodians who worked for U.S. firms in Phnom Penh were trapped in the capital and unable to get out.

U.S. military spokesmen in Bangkok declined comment on whether any supply drops were made Tuesday by U.S. air transports. Drops were made on Monday, however, the spokesmen confirmed.

South Vietnam's air force shelled

United Press International

SAIGON—Communist gunners, wheeling mortars and long-range artillery to within 30 miles of Saigon, bombarded South Vietnam's major air base Tuesday and grounded more than half the country's jet fighter-bomber force.

Two government planes that did get off the artillery battered runways, a pair of A37 Dragonfly jets, were downed by Communist ground-to-air SA7 missiles and their crewmen killed near Ben Tranh, 36 miles southwest of Saigon.

The bombardment of Bien Hoa air base 14 miles north of Saigon and the downing of the planes indicated Communist forces had pushed toward the capital a dangerous array of weaponry—artillery with a range of 17 miles and SAM missiles that can cripple the government's air force, vital to any defense of Saigon.

The Communist forces that attacked Bien Hoa bypassed the besieged provincial capital of Xuan Loc, 38 miles northeast of Saigon, where fighting has raged for a week. Military strategists said the attack against the air base might signal the start of a major drive against that keystone of Saigon's defenses.

The artillery—Russian-made 130mm cannon-hit Bien Hoa with 20 shells Monday night and a second barrage, at least partly from mortars, was launched Tuesday. Military sources said. The shells damaged the base's longest runway and grounded the government's workhorse F5 Freedom Fighter jets.

The smaller A37s, however, could use a shorter runway and continued their bombing missions against North Vietnamese and Viet Cong forces tightening a ring around Saigon.

The shelling of Bien Hoa, which occupies a vital spot on Saigon's northern defense perimeter, marked the closest use yet made of the long-barreled 130mm guns around the capital.

Bien Hoa over the years has been a favorite Communist target. It also is headquarters for the government's military command for the Saigon area and houses one of two remaining U.S. consulates outside Saigon.

Panel considers evacuation fund

United Press International

WASHINGTON—The Senate Foreign Relations Committee Tuesday completed a first draft of legislation to give President Ford a $200-million South Vietnam emergency fund, mainly for evacuating Americans and some South Vietnamese.

The legislation would also allow U.S. troops to be used to safeguard the evacuation.

Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger predicted the legislation, on lines worked out at an unusual White House meeting Monday between President Ford and the entire committee, would be acceptable to the President.

The draft legislation, which committee chairman Sen. John Sparkman described as "tentative," will be sent to the White House for study and the committee was to consider it again Wednesday.

Kissinger, in a 2½ hour appearance before the Senate Appropriations Committee Tuesday, also pressed for an additional $722 million in military aid for the Saigon government which he said would run out of ammunition by early June.

"If Congress does not approve our request then chaotic conditions will develop quite rapidly," Kissinger said, echoing administration warnings that Saigon had a chance to survive the Communist onslaught with additional American aid but would inevitably fall without it.

Sen. Jacob Javits, R-N.Y., said the general contingency fund was envisaged by the committee as "a global fund" to underwrite the evacuation of U.S. citizens and some other nationals.
