Officials say no nationals for gymnast

Teresa Trice, a member of the UNC Women's gymnastics team, qualified regionally for a chance to compete in the national gymnastics championships, which were held recently in Hayward, Calif. by the Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women (AIAW).

But Trice was then told that she could not make the trip.

According to Coach Ken Orurso and Francis Hogan, UNC women's athletic director, the gymnastics team originally planned to send Trice and teammate Joan Healy to represent UNC at the national meet. Then, when a scoring error in the qualifying round was discovered, disqualifying Healy, the decision was made not to send Trice either.

Trice said that at the time Orurso refused to tell her who made the decision about not going. She said he also told her it was "none of her business".

Orurso said recently, however, that he and Hogan made the decision together.

Whoever made the decision to first promise and then deny Trice the opportunity to challenge first-rate college gymnasts in national competition, both Orurso and Hogan now defend the position by saying that Trice is only a freshman—the logic being that she has three more years to compete, and that she probably wouldn't have done well this year anyway.

That justification has been a small consolation to Trice, who said the fact that she worked hard enough to qualify was reason enough to send her. "It just seems like not letting us go to the nationals when we do well really ruins the incentive," Trice said.

Whether or not a coach or an athletic director has an obligation to send qualified athletes on to higher competition is an important question. And it is a topic that both Orurso and Hogan wouldn't address.

There is also a question of consistency. Vicki Greenwood, who is also only a freshman with three more years of competition, qualified and was sent to the National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA) field hockey nationals in Chicago in November.

Asked to explain the difference, Hogan said that Greenwood had been "selected" by the NCAA for the field hockey nationals, and that Trice had only "qualified for" the gymnastics nationals.

Orurso and Hogan also pointed out that it is expensive to transport only one girl and one coach all the way across the country.

But Moyer Smith, UNC Assistant athletic director in charge of finances, said he was never approached for the money.

In fact, Smith said that he was "very receptive to the idea when it first came up," but that neither Orurso nor Hogan ever formally asked the athletic department to pay for the trip.

When asked to explain, Hogan said, "I don't know why you're trying to make such a big deal out of this."

The deal is this: If an athlete qualifies for post-season competition, will his or her participation still be contingent on what appears as arbitrary approval by athletic officials? Who is to decide which post-season qualifiers should be allowed to go on and which ones must stay at home?

Cheerleaders named

The University of North Carolina, whose 1974-75 cheer-leading squad was rated the third best in America, has chosen its new unit for the upcoming school year.

Six members of last year's squad and six new members were selected to the team.

The returnees are Charles Bell, a rising senior from Clinton; Jill Coleman, a rising senior from Greensboro; Anthony Greene, a rising junior from Goldsboro; Peaches Hauser, a rising senior from Winston-Salem; Sharon Palsha, a rising junior from Burlington; and Debbie Timmons, a rising junior from Winston-Salem.

In judging by the International Cheerleading Federation, last year's UNC squad was ranked third nationally behind Auburn and Southern California. Three graduating seniors—David Belton, John Elam and Maria Morris—made the All-America team.

Walter Rabb, "The Old Leaguer" at the University of North Carolina, ranks 13th among the nation's top 20 coaches, according to a survey conducted by Southeastern Conference Baseball News.

Rabb came into this season, his 29th at the Tar Heel helm, with an overall record of 474 wins, 289 losses and nine ties for a winning percentage of .621. His current Carolina team has a 15-15 record.

The top 20 active major college coaches were researched and then listed in order of their winning percentage. A minimum of 280 victories was required to make the 1975 list.

The leader is Gene Shell of Tulsa with 283 victories and only 76 losses in nine years of coaching for a percentage of .789. Shell barely nosed out Southern Cal's Rod DeDeaux who has won 817 and lost 248 in 27 years for a percentage of .767.

Carolina's jayvee baseball team raised its record to 7-7 last week by capturing three games in a pair of doubleheaders. Aggressive baserunning was the key as the Tar Babies swiped 30 bases in the four games.

On Tuesday, Carolina captured a 2-1 win over Winston-Salem Reynolds High School, but dropped a 10-8 game to Louisburg College.

Wednesday saw the Tar Babies grab a pair from Ferrum Junior College, 12-10 and 10-6.

The UNC women's lacrosse club will play its first match ever today against Duke at 4 p.m. on Navy Field.

Three ACC championships set this week

Three of the top five spring sports championships in the Atlantic Coast Conference will be determined this week.

The golf crown will be decided in a 54-hole tournament that begins Thursday at Foxfire Golf and Country Club at Pinehurst, while the tennis tournament begins a three-day run at Duke Friday. The track and field championships will be determined in a one-day meet at N.C. State Saturday. Tennis finals will be held Sunday afternoon.

The baseball tournament is slated a week later, starting April 24, while the lacrosse championship will be decided on regular-season play.

In all three of this week's meets, the defending champions are favored to keep their crowns. Wake Forest's defending NCAA champions are picked to claim their ninth straight ACC golf title, while North Carolina will be going after its sixth tennis crown in a row. Maryland will be seeking its 21st track and field championship—its 20th straight.

Coach Jesse Haddock's Deacon golfers have won three tournaments this spring. They easily captured the Big Four Championship, winning by 51 shots over second place N.C. State. The other victories were the Palmetto Intercollegiate and the Iron Duke Spring Intercollegiate. They finished second in the Pinehurst Intercollegiate.

Heading the Wake Forest team is 1974's Collegiate Golfer of the Year, Curtis Strange, a sophomore from Virginia Beach, Va. Strange pocketed the NCAA individual title last Spring and finished in the Masters. He finished ninth in last year's ACC field.

Bob Bynam of Wake Forest and Vance Heafner of N.C. State, who tied for the individual crown last year at the Carolina Trace course near Sanford, are both back. The two players posted identical 224 scores.

Play over the Foxfire layout will begin Thursday at 8:30 a.m. and will field 49 golfers, seven from each school. Friday and Saturday will also begin at 8:30 a.m.

Competition in the track meet will begin at 12 Saturday and will conclude that night.

Hockey club 'breaks the ice'

by John Hopkins Staff Writer

The UNC ice hockey club will travel to the heart of tobaccoland this weekend to participate in a history-making four-team tournament.

When the UNC club tangles with a similar organization from Duke on Friday, those present will witness the first intercollegiate hockey game ever played in North Carolina.

The unlikely site for the affair is Greenville, N.C., where the East Carolina University (ECU) hockey club will host the four-team tournament. Other than UNC and ECU, a similar organization from Duke will participate, along with a team of rink rats from Greensboro, who call themselves the Greensboro All Stars.

On Friday, UNC will play Duke and ECU will tangle with Greensboro. The two winners will battle Saturday for tournament honors, with losers playing in a consolation.

Still young, the UNC club was hastily formed in late January of this year and took to the ice one month later, almost to the day.

Led by club president and acting coach Lloyd Scher, the club raised enough money to get the necessary equipment, and travel to Charlotte to play two games against teams from the Charlotte Senior League.

UNC emerged from that weekend affair in February with a win and a loss. It took a first game 1-0, but lost the second 6-5, after blowing a 5-2 lead.

The club has not had a real practice session due to lack of ice facilities in the area. However, it has managed to get to Greensboro (nearest available ice) for some limited workouts.
