

Women netters take early lead

by Kevin Barris
Staff Writer

After two rounds of singles, Carolina's women netters held a slim 13-11 lead over Duke during the first day of competition in the North Carolina Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women (NCAIAW) tennis tournament here in Chapel Hill.

Play was expected to continue until late Thursday, with the fourth round of singles beginning today at 10 a.m. First-round doubles were scheduled to be played Thursday night, with the second and third rounds beginning today.

The Blue Devils have won seven singles matches to UNC's five, but first-round byes and a default gave the Tar Heels the advantage.

None of the seeded singles' players lost. No. 1 seed Cindy Johnson (Duke) breezed through her first match, beating Marianne Mattox (Peace College) 6-0, 6-0. Suzanne Bowron (UNC), who is in Johnson's bracket and the no. 6 seed, also won easily. She beat Debbie Miller (Mars Hill) 6-1, 6-1. If Johnson and Bowron reach the quarter-finals, they will face each other at 2 p.m. today.

The first Duke-Carolina confrontation should have been Thursday afternoon. Dianne Sites (UNC) was scheduled to play Margaret Duncan (Duke) and the winner faces Emily Waugh at 10 a.m. today.

Carney Timberlake (UNC), the no. 2 seed, will meet Teresa Donahue (Duke) at 10 a.m. The winner will probably play Rebecca Garcia (UNC) in the 2 p.m. quarter-final match.

ACC track: dogfight for 2nd

by Bill Moss
Staff Writer

The ACC outdoor track championship will be held Saturday afternoon and evening at N.C. State's tartan track, beginning at 12:30 with the field events. Though the story is essentially the same one that has been witnessed for 20 years — (Maryland wins overwhelmingly and there is a dog fight for second place) this season's script may feature a few new stars.

Traditionally, the Terrapin thinclads have dominated the field events to a degree that warranted accusations of gluttony. But so far this year the top performances in several events are by athletes from the six "also-rans." That State will probably sweep the shot put 1-2 is good for the conference but bad for the Tar Heels. State will be battling Carolina tooth and nail for that precious second place trophy.

Bob Medlin and Lebaron Caruthers are the Wolfpack weight men who should take some points away from Maryland in the shot and discus. In Ed Fern and Shane Stroupe, Clemson has the top two high jumpers in the conference. And as always, the Tar Heels' bread and butter lies in the middle distances where they have several legitimate candidates for a victory on Saturday.

UNC co-captain Dave Hamilton is one of the front runners in the three-mile field. To win that event, he will have to beat Robby Perkins, one of Duke's many strong middle distance men. Hamilton's three-mile time heads the conference, but he is aware that Perkins will challenge him.

"The season's been so short; we've only had four meets," he said. "The qualifying times don't really mean anything this year. Perkins is the number one guy in the three, and he has run a 4:04 mile. He's the guy I have to beat."

Most of the finals will be run under the lights, and according to Hamilton, that should improve the times. "The times seem faster at night. It's easier to breathe and everybody just seems ready for it. I think all the races will be fast."

In the mile, UNC's Ralph King, Tommy Ward and Henry Jones will likely challenge Perkins and teammate Richard Schwartz. William Southerland and Kevin McLee in the half-mile and Kent Taylor in the steeplechase also threaten to break the tape in their respective events.

Other keys in the Tar Heels quest for second place behind perennially victorious Maryland will be Jeff Gorski in the javelin. Gil Vance in the shot put, Sam Beasley in the broad jump, Reggie Brown in the 440 and Dave Robinson in the pole vault.

Matt Wilson pitched the UNC jayvee baseballers over Chowan 7-4 in an error-marred game Thursday. Designated hitter Bernie Menapace had three hits for the winning Tar Babies.

Orurso weighs 'confidence' in Trice decision

Sports fans enraged by the injustice done to UNC gymnast Teresa Trice by Coach Ken Orurso can now quell their hostility.

I accused Orurso and Hogan (April 16, DTH) of arbitrarily denying Trice participation in the women's gymnastics nationals, though she had qualified for the event in regional competition.

Trice was denied. But the reason for the decision was not arbitrary, just private.

"The biggest problem I had the whole year was getting her (Teresa) to have confidence in herself," Orurso first revealed Wednesday. "Then, after thinking about sending her to the nationals, I decided that since she had confidence in herself now, I didn't feel it was worth the risk of jeopardizing what it took so long to get."

Orurso said that he didn't give Trice or the DTH the real reason for his decision at first because he didn't want to give Trice the impression that he doubted her ability.

"She's done a tremendous job in one year," Orurso said, "but I know personally that the first time you go to national gymnastic competition and perform in front of 8,000 people—and then you look around and see how good everybody is—it just really shakes you. She just hadn't had enough competitive experience to handle that," Orurso said.

Orurso also said that he defended his right to keep secrets from his athletes in some instances.

"If you know you're right, if you're doing it for their best interest, and you don't think they need to know, then they don't need to know," he said.

Trice herself said Wednesday she respected Orurso's decision not to send her to the nationals, and that she was never really indignant about the denial, just confused about the reasons behind it.

She also said she now agrees with her coach that under the circumstances, it was better to give her no reasons at all than to jeopardize her self-confidence by publicizing the truth.

Orurso and Hogan tried first to withhold the truth and I tried to bring it out. Between the three of us we jeopardized the very thing we all sought most to protect—Teresa Trice's future.
