Illegal spying alleged in D.C.

WASHINGTON — The U.S. attorney's office is investigating allegations of illegal spying by District of Columbia police and is trying to determine whether top police or FBI officials were aware of it, the Washington Post said Sunday.

The Post quoted sources familiar with the investigation as saying the prosecutors have been told by former law enforcement officers and police informants that some of the information gathered by D.C. police on anti-war groups between 1968 and 1972 was then shared with the Secret Service and the Central Intelligence Agency.

The alleged bugging occurred with "some frequency" at the height of antiwar organizing in Washington and increased at the time of major protest demonstrations, sources told the Post. The Post's sources said the CIA allegedly provided at least one of the bugging devices and other technical assistance and police officers committed at least one burglary to spy on radicals.

There is no evidence yet that top police, FBI or CIA officials instructed any of their agents or informants to commit illegal acts or plant electronic recording devices, the sources told the newspaper.

The statute of limitations would prohibit prosecution now for illegal wiretapping that occurred before 1970. But illegally obtained information may have already been used in criminal prosecutions and disclosure of that now could result in reversals of convictions or civil suits charging government misconduct, the Post said.

Portuguese situation called 'chaotic'

LISBON, Portugal — Popular Democratic party leader Francisco sa Carneiro said Sunday Portugal is "heading to the brink of Chaos."

"There is a climate of violence and anarchy," Carneiro said. "When people and soldiers point weapons against other people and shoot at them, no one can be tranquil or secure. The country is in danger."

Both the Communists and the left-of-center Popular Democrats staged rallies Sunday night in an intensifying political war that has the Communists openly opposing a government in which they still participate.

The Socialists and Popular Democrats have swung firmly into line behind Prime Minister Jose Pinheiro de Azevedo's efforts to curb the anarchy that has swept the country.

But the Communists have supported what they call the "popular offensive" by revolutionary leftist groups in the recent wave of civil and military disorders.

The Communists said in a statement that the current political orientation of the sixth provisional government "will encounter a redoubled resistance and new aggravation of the crisis" unless the government's drift to the right is halted.

At their rally in the town of Lavradio across the Tagus River from Lisbon Sunday, attended by party leader Alvaro Cunhal, thousands of Communists shouted: "Onward to the construction of a revolutionary government."
