"Sometimes they don't look at what we send in," he said.

"We don't anticipate this happening again."

He said he doesn't know if the show can be rebroadcast for the viewers who missed it Saturday. The show was broadcast live, and McLarty doesn't know if a tape was made.

"If we get enough requests (to run Saturday Night, we can try," he said.

Well, EXCUUUUUUUUUUSE ME!

Approval of Carter's first 10 months in office also was measured. Five percent rated Carter "very good," 38 percent "good," 37 percent "neither good nor poor," 11 percent "poor" and 4 percent "very poor."

Reaction to Carter was most favorable among graduate students, 63 percent of whom rated Carter's performance "good" or "very good." Next lowest were females and freshmen at 37 percent.

Jesse Helms, North Carolina's senior U.S. senator, met with far less approval. "Very poor" was the most common response about his performance, cited by 27 percent.

Six percent rated Helms "very good," 10 percent "good," 19 percent "neither good nor poor" and 15 percent "poor."

Helms had more support from males, 21 percent of whom rated his performance "good" or "very good," and juniors at 20 percent.

Dance company to appear tonight

The Footpath Dance Company, an all-female modern dance troupe from Ohio, will appear at 8 p.m. today in Memorial Hall. Admission to the event, which is sponsored by the UNC Women's Festival, is $1. The troupe also will conduct a master class in modern dance Tuesday afternoon.

Footpath, under the guidance of artistic director Alice Rubinstein, is a fairly new company, formed in 1976. Rubinstein organized the troupe after becoming dissatisfied with the Karipides-Kurth company, with which she was dancing at Case Western Reserve University. She gathered around her a collection of extremely talented and superbly trained women, individuals who had studied with a collection of teachers ranging from Twyla Tharp to Hanya Holm to Erick Hawkins. Interestingly enough the troupe was all female only by coincidence, none of the auditioning males matched the technical level of the women.

Rubinstein herself studied with Martha Graham, Hawkins, and at the Juilliard School of Music. Her company, which made its debut in November 1976 at Lake Erie College, immediately was praised by critics for its originality, and for the open emotionality of the works performed. The high technical proficiency of each of the dancers and the expressions of individuality which was afforded them also were applauded. There performances here will include pieces introduced at Lake Erie, such as Anna, a portrait of a woman at different stages in her life, and more recent works.

Footpath's performance here should be highly innovative and entertaining if the dancers live up to their recently acquired, yet highly positive, reputation.
