Board busy with parking woes

By BERNIE RANSBOTTOM Staff Writer

Parking dominated the meeting of the Chapel Hill Board of Aldermen Monday as the board held two public hearings on proposals to construct parking facilities and adopted a revised ordinance allowing residents to park on restricted streets in specified instances.

The revised ordinance supersedes the ordinance passed by the town in July 1977. That ordinance provided for the issuance of parking permits to town residents, allowing them to park in zones where parking otherwise is prohibited.

A suit filed against the town in August 1977 resulted in an injunction prohibiting the town from issuing any additional permits or honoring those permits already issued. The suit charged that the practice of issuing permits on the basis of residency constitutes discrimination against non-residents.

The new ordinance is still subject to the injunction, but provides for more specific restrictions on eligibility for a permit.

To be eligible for an annually renewable permit under the new ordinance, an applicant must live on a street where parking is prohibited on both sides and own a vehicle which he has no means of parking off the right of way. He also must receive an estimate from the town engineer that constructing off-street parking on his property would cost more than $800 or require the destruction of an area or object of historical significance."

A one-year, non-renewable permit is available to residents if building an off-street parking area on their property would cost less than $800.

More than two hours of the four and onehalf hour meeting was devoted to a public hearing on the University's request for a special-use permit for the construction of a five-story 842-space parking deck.

The deck would be constructed on the parking lot behind the existing deck on Manning Drive, across the street from the North Carolina Memorial Hospital. Exits would be constructed to Mason Farm and East roads. Mason Farm Road would be extended to carry traffic to Pittsboro Road. with a traffic light and turning lanes on Pittsboro at the new intersection.

Several residents expressed concern that the proposed deck, if constructed as planned, will substantially increase traffic on residential streets, especially Mason Farm Road and South Columbia Street.

But a study prepared for the University by Kimley-Horn and Associates Inc. says the deck will increase parking in the area by only 15 percent, due to spaces which would be removed to promote better traffic flow and actual construction of the deck.

The request for a special-use permit was referred to the planning and traffic boards

By SUSAN LADD Staff Writer

The state's first skin bank will be established at the North Carolina Jaycee Burn Center at N.C. Memorial Hospital, Dr. Roger E. Salisbury, center director, announced last week.

Salisbury explained at a news conference that human skin obtained from the recently deceased is ' the Best material vet discovered for covering the wounds of burn victims. He called the procedure one of the great advances in burn care in the last 20

A thin layer of skin is removed from the donor's body, frozen in liquid nitrogen and stored up to six months before use, Salisbury explained.

Special equipment for freezing and storing skin has been ordered for the bank, which will be ready for use next spring.

The use of human skin to cover wounds has several benefits. It makes the patient more comfortable, affording more freedom of
