By ED WILLIAMS Staff Writer

If Dr. David Reuben never quite answered everything you wanted to know about sex, the Human Sexuality Information and Counseling might have the answer.

Offering more than those venereal disease and birth control pamphlets heaped up inside the union and pedantic tid-bits which ask, "Did you know that nearly half of all unwed women in America have had sexual intercourse by the age of 19?" the HSICS serves both the UNC campus and Chapel Hill community, providing counseling, information and referrals on all aspects of sexuality and interpersonal relationships.

"Sexuality is an integral part of our lives," said Bill Bean, a UNC biology graduate and HSICS counselor. "A lot of people have problems, often because of a misunderstanding. We think we can

The HSICS began in 1971 and became the first student-run sexuality information and counseling service in the nation. Emphasizing peer counseling, the service currently has more than 45 trained volunteers, most of whom are students. Each volunteer undergoes a 20 to 30 hour program dealing with basic information of sexual concern.

"We are nonjudgmental - we don't care what a person's sexual leanings are," Bean said. "We help many people by simply dispelling myths and

Bean said the HSICS offers an outreach program in which counselors are available to discuss various topics on sexuality to classrooms, dorms, fraternities and sororities.

"We took a poll one year and found that more than 40 percent of the student body never heard of us." Bean said. "I think some students might be intimidated just because we deal with sexuality. And some students will not come by our office (Room 256, Suite B in the Carolina Union) for information, simply because they're confusing the informational aspect with counseling."

"We are not specifically geared only to crises," Jack Smith, another HSICS counselor, added "We are not just a high-tension counseling service Students should feel free to come by to talk - talk about anything. We do."

Bean and Smith agreed that there has been a shift in the kind of questions students are asking now. "Oh sure, pregnancy, VD, contraception and sexual dysfunction are still around," Bean said. "But there's been a shift from the basic questions. birth control and all that, to relationship

"Students are asking about interacting, communicating and getting along with one another. I don't think there's any one reason for the shift. I guess there's just been more openness with the topic of sex."

The HSICS is offering a number of spring semester activities, including:

· "Sexuality and Relationships," with speaker Dr. John Reckless, 8 p.m. Thursday in Carroll

· "Alternatives in Childbirth," with speakers Mr. and Mrs. David Stewart. 7:30 p.m. Monday

University, town officials say shared-ride tax1 success

By LAURA PHELPS Staff Writer

The shared-ride taxi service, initiated in the fall of 1977, has been determined a success by town and University officials. "To me, it looks like a successful experiment," said John C. Temple, UNC's vice chancellor for business and finance. "We can use fixed routes in the day when there is demand and the shared-rides at night when the demand is less.

"The town and the University objective is to make the transportation system acceptable to the people who use it. The costs

"The problem between the town and University arose when we (the University) were not involved with the planning for the shared-ride taxis, It's not that we don't approve of using them."

Temple said the University has a commitment to the students who bought bus passes. "We must provide a level of night service at a comparable cost to fixed-route bus service to fulfill this commitment."

Since the Chapel Hill Transportation Department lifted the 25-cent surcharge on Nov. 16 for rides from bus stop to bus stop, there are between 80 and 100 riders per night, according to dispatcher David Jones.

Bill Callahan, transportation department administrative assistant, said the department compared ridership before and after the surcharge drop, however, and found little increase in the ridership rates. "Ridership was growing weekly, and the increase after dropping the surcharge was not far off the normal rate of increase," Callahan said.

"We haven't taken a long, hard look at the service for the second semester," Callahan said. "But now the shared-ride taxis are a low priority item."

Possibly by this summer, there will be a long-term report on the service to decide whether it provides substantial and adequate service to the town and students, Callahan

To get student input, Student Government was asked to evaluate the shared-ride system, Temple said. "There was not a great deal of student interest, so we feel there is not an urgent need to change the program." One survey conducted by a graduate student showed that the people who tried the shared-ride system liked it, and some favored the present system over the fixed bus routes in use last year.

The survey also showed that the newness of the idea kept people from using the shared-ride service.

Union looks at acoustics revamp to lure big names to Blue Heaven

By TERRI HUNT

If you have ever wondered why few big name musicians appear in concert at UNC, it could be the way their music sounds in Carmichael Auditorium.

The big problem is that the auditorium's acoustics are inadequate for listening to music. according to Harry Simmons, program production coordinator of the Carolina Union. Because it was built mainly for basketball, Carmichael's construction didn't really take into account proper acoustics for musical performances, he said.

"The acoustics in Carmichael are bad," Simmons said. "But it's the best facility we have on campus for concerts, because it's the biggest."

The ceiling, Simmons said, presents the major acoustical problem. Built like a hollow dome with protruding beams, it serves as a type of megaphone catching the sound as it bounces out of the speakers and forcing it to the floor. According to Simmons, this effect has caused a lot of dissatisfaction among spectators and performers, prompting singer Stephen Stills to say it sounded like "a toilet bowl" when he performed there in 1975.

For several years, those persons at the Carolina Union involved in the selection of concert performers have pushed for the improvement of the acoustics in Carmichael, Simmon said.

him. That's all we can do right now." The major obstacle of the project is funding. Although the physical education department controls use of the building, the Carolina Union would have to pay for the installment of acoustical equipment, Simmons said. He estimated that the cost would be between $35,000 and $60,000.

"There's no way we could afford that because we don't have that much money available. It would take an effort like each student paying a $2 fee. That's $40,000 and would help tremendously.

Although Simmons sees construction of a false ceiling, installing acoustical tile or closing in the hollow dome as possible solutions to the problem, UNC physics professor Joe Straley said he believes obtaining a total solution would be

"They have a dilemma because if they try and make it appropriate for concerts, it will be inappropriate for basketball," Straley said. "Acoustical tile and upholstered seats would have to be installed. This would soften and control the sound, benefitting concerts.

"But it would hurt basketball because it wouldn't be noisy, and you need noise fr
