City builds training unit to improve firefighting

By KAREN BARBER
Staff Writer

Chapel Hill firefighters and public safety officers will be better equipped to learn and improve on existing firefighting and rescue techniques upon completion of a new fire-training facility, to be located at the intersection of N.C. 86 and Weaver Dairy Road.

The six-acre site where the training facility will be built was purchased in 1975 with revenue sharing funds and is large enough for the construction of a new fire station should the area be annexed.

The facility will include a four-story drill tower for simulating emergencies, a storage area and a 10,000 gallon drafting tank filled with water to check pumper trucks.

The groundbreaking ceremony for the $125,000 facility was Tuesday morning at the construction site. Chapel Hill Fire Chief Everett Lloyd, Mayor Jim Wallace and Town Manager Kurt Jenne participated in the groundbreaking ceremony for the new facility, scheduled to be completed in June.

When the facility is completed, training for firefighters and public safety officers will include practice jumps into life nets, advancing hoses on fire escapes, using ladders on multi-story buildings and smoke training. Assistant Fire Chief Robert Williams said the bottom floor of the planned facility could be converted into a smokehouse for smoke-training purposes.

Firefighters will receive a minimum of 240 hours of fire and rescue training per year, and public safety officers will receive a minimum of 96 hours of fire training per year.

Fire Chief Everett Lloyd said the facility also may be used to train volunteer fire organizations in Orange County.

Training sessions are now held on a limited basis at Fire Station No. 2 in Glen Lennox, and at University Mall after closing hours by permission only. Pumps are tested at a lake near Legion Rd.

The Fire department has not had a drill tower since 1974, when a tower at Chapel Hill's Plant Road operations center was demolished to make room for other facilities, Lloyd said.

The Chapel Hill Board of Aldermen approved bids for the construction and plumbing of the facility in November. Funds will come from the town's recent $2.65-million bond issue.

Summer internships in government available to N.C. juniors, seniors

Juniors and seniors in college who are North Carolina residents have until Feb. 27 to apply for two summer intern programs in state government.

The N.C. Intern Council in the Department of Administration will select 125 interns to be placed in various departments. The interns will work from June 5 through Aug. 11.

Twenty-four students will be selected by an advisory committee to participate in a living-learning internship in N.C. state government directed by the Institute of Government. These interns will work from May 30 through Aug. 11.

Students in both programs will work 40 hours each week in a responsible position in a state department, participate in evening educational seminars and be paid $120 per week.

Students interested in either program should secure a State of North Carolina application form from UNC's placement office in Hanes Hall. Students applying for the N.C. Internship Office program should mail the application to the N.C. Internship Office, 112 W. Lane St., 115 Howard Building, Raleigh, N.C. 27603.

Students interested in the Institute of Government program should mail an application to the Institute of Government, UNC, Chapel Hill, N.C., 27514.
