ABC news team questions students

An ABC news and camera crew was on the Chapel Hill campus Thursday afternoon questioning students, faculty, and administrators about the UNC University system.

George Straight, a reporter for ABC, said the story is on the higher education system in North Carolina. The Chapel Hill is the first one visited by the crew. Straight said the crew would not be able to go to all 16 campuses in the University system, but will contact administrators at each campus.

One of the students interviewed was senior David Ascher, Ascher, who is white, said Straight asked him how he picked UNC-CH, if he had considered attending a traditionally black university and whether Ascher thinks he would have felt uncomfortable or like a member of a minority had he attended a black school. Ascher said he felt Straight was seeking examples of Southern prejudice.

Straight also interviewed Jimmy Dixon, a freshman. Dixon said Straight did not mention HEW or its demands on the N.C. University System in the interview.

A career in law— without law school.

What can you do with only a bachelor's degree?

Now there is a way to bridge the gap between an undergraduate education and a challenging, responsible career. The Lawyer's Assistant is able to do work traditionally done by lawyers.

Three months of intensive training can give you the skills—the courses are taught by lawyers. You choose one of the seven courses offered—choose the city in which you want to work.

Since 1970, The Institute for Paralegal Training has placed more than 2,000 graduates in law firms, banks, and corporations in over 80 cities.

If you are a senior of high academic standing and are interested in a career as a Lawyer's Assistant, we'd like to meet you.
