Pack maintains lead over Heels in golf tourney

By ALAN BOYETTE
Staff Writer

N.C. State dropped two strokes Sunday at Finley Golf Course but the Wolfpack maintained a four-stroke lead going into Monday's final round of a tri-meet between State, Carolina and Duke. The final round will be played at Raleigh's McGregor Downs Golf Club.

State shot a team score of 660 in the first round at Duke Friday, leading UNC by six strokes. The Tar Heels picked up two strokes Sunday, shooting a 672 for a second-round total of 1338. Duke shot a 673-677 for a third-place 1350.

In the opening round, UNC's Phil Bland and David Whitfield both shot a par 71. Whitfield shot a 3-under-par 69 Sunday with two birdies on the front nine and a birdie and eagle on the back side. Freshman Joey Sadowski shot a second-round 2-under-par 70 for the Tar Heels after finishing the first day three over. "Today we had a couple of high scores," Sadowski said, "but they should come down in Raleigh the way mine did today."

State's Tom Reynolds led all golfers with a 3-under-par 68 after the first round, but finished with an 81 Sunday. Duke's Charles Bolling leads the Blue Devils with a 3-over 176.

Looking to Monday's final round UNC coach Devon Brouse said, "State will have a definite advantage playing on their home course, but we haven't played our top three players yet. Using them will neutralize the odds some." John McGough, Kevin King, and Frank Fuhrer will fill the first three positions for UNC Monday, as both Duke and N.C. State have played its top players already.

ACC football roundup

Ted Brown rises to TV occasion

By BILL WELCH
Associated Press Writer

That Ted Brown, he knows an opportunity when he sees one.

Brown, N.C. State's senior runningback who's being touted as the ACC's first legitimate Heisman Trophy candidate, got a chance to show why with a network television audience Saturday. And he used it by grounding out 198 yards and a touchdown with second and third efforts as State downed Syracuse 27-19.

Brown did it without a break-away run—his longest was 23 yards—but with consistent gainers on sweeps and up the middle plunges. He carried 33 times, averaged six yards a carry, and ran his career yardage to 3,574.

Despite Brown's workmanlike running, State needed a third-quarter field goal and a 6-yard scoring run by Billy Ray Vickers to come from behind in the second half and subdue the Orangemen.

Clemson 58, Citadel 3

"This was a very important game for Clemson, a very big win," Coach Charley Pell said after his Tigers had bullied The Citadel. "We have worked hard for a month, as hard as any team I've ever coached, and for them to come out and perform as they did today, I think is a pretty good testimony for the hard work they put in."

The season opener was a tuneup for next week's trip to Georgia, and ACC Player of the Year Steve Fuller completed all nine first half pass attempts, then sat out the second half.

Maryland 24, Louisville 17

Maryland, ranked 20th in the nation, needed Alvin Maddox' three-yard touchdown run with a minute and a half remaining to down Louisville.

IS THIS WHAT YOUR KISSES TASTE LIKE?
If you smoke cigarettes, you taste like one. Your clothes and hair can smell stale and unpleasant, too. You don't notice it, but people close to you do. Especially if they don't smoke. And non-smokers are the best people to love. They live longer.

Crum, Heels glad first one's over

Lee Pace

Kenan Stadium clock was winding down. The East Carolina Pirates were nearing the Carolina goal line and 51,150 persons not including the players, freebies and the busy little fellows selling mixers and chasers were nervously wondering if the Pirates would score a final touchdown to win the football game.

Tar Heels not in the game at the moment were clustered to the right side of their sideline territory while Denny Marcin, Tar Heel defensive coordinator, was busy telling linebacker Buddy Curry which defenses to use via a series of hand signals that made one wonder if Marcin was suffering from a case of hives or playing traffic cop or both.

Marcin's boss, Dick Crum, was about 30 yards upfield, standing near the 40 yardline on the side away from the action. It wasn't that the Tar Heel head coach wasn't interested in what was going on on the field. To the contrary, Crum felt there wasn't a whole lot he could do at the moment.

"I always stay away from the defensive coordinator," Crum said later. "I don't want to keep telling him how to run the defense. That's his job. I don't want to cloud his thinking."

But as soon as the Pirates lost their sixth fumble of the afternoon to end their final drive, Crum was back in the thick of things, looking for quarterback Clyde Christensen and telling him to hug the football for all of their lives. A few seconds later, Crum was strolling to midfield to congratulate ECU coach Pat Dye on the Pirates' improved showing over their first two games, perhaps adding that it was nice the Pirates didn't ruin Crum's inaugural as Carolina's new football coach. "I'm glad to get that first game over," Crum said.

And although the character of UNC's 14-10 win might have been a folly at mid-season, it at least passed for an opening game. The Tar Heels showed Saturday afternoon that they could have a very good football team this fall.

They also proved they could have many problems. "It was a very typical opening game," Crum said. "We made some mistakes that we'll have to work on."

Among those mistakes were:
• Illegal procedure and delay-of-game penalties that helped stop three first half UNC drives deep in ECU territory;
• Poor timing on several plays, such as the one in which flanker

Wayne Tucker, running a simple down-and-out sideline pattern, turned to look at quarterback Matt Kupec in time to be hit in the face mask with Kupec's pass.

• Confusion of the offensive secondary on several pass plays. On one play, Pirate Terry Gallaher had slipped 15 yards behind the UNC secondary and would have scored an easy touchdown if Leander Green's pass had been accurate. That was the comical play in which Gallaher slowed down, was hit by Bernie Menapace and fell to the turf with three Tar Heel defenders 46 yards closer to the UNC goal.

"We've got this game under our belt," Crum said. "There's no substitute for experience."

The Tar Heels had waited and waited and waited for their opening game, which came a week later than most schools' opener, and the Tar Heels' anxiousness showed Saturday afternoon. The game couldn't have come soon enough for Crum either, who had anticipated it since the day he was named head coach last January. But the Tar Heel coach, calm and relaxed after the game, said he was cool inside before his first game as a Tar Heel.

"You know, I was telling Coach Marcin that I felt calmer today than when we played at Miami," he said.

Crum took the team to a Durham motel Friday night to keep the players from the temptation of campus activity. "You ever tried to sleep in a dorm the night before a game and get a good night's sleep?" he asked.

At least Crum wasn't going to worry about sleep Saturday night. His first victory, though not a pretty one, still counts as much as a 50-0 romp, and wasn't unacceptable for an opening game with a new offense against a team that seethes at the sight of Carolina blue.

But the Tar Heels won't dwell long on their win. Maryland's in town this week.
