

UNC-TV seeks rise in funding from state

By KATHY CURRY
Staff Writer

The UNC Television Network's legislative request for a funding increase is a question of priorities within the UNC system itself, network director George Bair said this week.

UNC-TV is asking for an additional $700,000 for its 1979-80 operating budget, a 25 percent increase that would bring annual state support of the network to $3.6 million, Bair said.

"(The money) will be committed to enhancing our capacity to have better production across the state by providing people to work on program development, scriptwriting, and money for mobile units," he said.

The Budget and Finance Committee of the UNC Board of Governors will consider the request Friday.

Bair said he is optimistic, but the position of network funding on the priority list of the University system will determine the fate of the request.

"The University system must establish priorities for the General Assembly," he said. "The legislature generally does not look at every line of the system's budget request; it merely appropriates money down the list until the money runs out. After the budget recommendation leaves the Board of Governors, the fate of our request will be pretty much determined."

Worth Coltrane, chairperson for the Budget and Finance Committee, declined to comment on the recommendations until they are made public at the meeting Friday. However, Coltrane said he believes the board will approve any request supported by University administrators.

The General Assembly last spring appropriated $5.8 million to the network for technical equipment to expand transmission across the state.

Bair said the money appropriated last spring cannot be used for programming. "The select House committee appointed to study our budgetary requests asked us not to request any more money than could be used expressly for engineering at that time," he said.

Bair said a similar request three years ago to expand programming facilities did not survive the list of priorities with the Board of Governors.

State Rep. Edward Holmes of Pittsboro, chairperson of the House Appropriations Committee, seems cautious in his estimation of the legislative success of the request. "I know (the network) needs more money for production, but it depends on what they specifically plan to do with the additional funds whether or not the legislature will grant the request," he said.

Holmes said that if the money is used for specific improvements in service, and not just to pay additional personnel, the measure probably would pass easily.

Bair said although part of the increase would go to 16 salaried employees currently funded through the Corporation of Public Broadcasting, such an action would indirectly improve service by freeing approximately $455,000 of CPB funds for use in production.

Holmes said good indications for the passage of the measure represent an increasing legislative commitment to the network in the face of recent suggestions to separate the network from the University system.

Earlier this year, opposition surfaced against University control of the network. Led by Duke University professor Joel Fleishman, opponents said the network did not receive sufficient funding through the University and would be better funded through an independent state agency.

Newspaper strikers ratify new contract

NEW YORK (AP)—Striking pressmen overwhelmingly ratified a new contract with The New York Post on Tuesday, ending their union's eight-week walkout at the afternoon daily, a union official said.

However, it was not immediately clear whether The Post would be able to publish a Wednesday edition. Typographers, who have a long-term contract with The Post, had returned to their jobs before the pressmen took their vote.

Former CIA agent's body found in bay

BALTIMORE (AP)—Authorities said Tuesday that a body dragged from Chesapeake Bay belted with divers' weights was that of a former high-ranking Central Intelligence Agency official. Police said he had been shot in the head.

The decomposing body of John Paisley, 55, of Washington, was identified through dental charts by the state medical examiner. It had been found Sunday. Paisley's death could have been suicide or murder, according to Bill Clark of the state police. Police and the medical examiner said Paisley died of a .38-caliber bullet fired against his head, behind the left ear.

They said 40 pounds of diving weights were strapped around his waist and that the body had been in the water at least one week.

Paisley retired in 1974 after serving as deputy director of the CIA's Office of Strategic Research. For the past six months, he was a consultant to the accounting firm Coopers Lybrand.

William and Emily Harris sentenced

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP)—William and Emily Harris, who a month ago said they were proud they kidnapped Patricia Hearst, were sentenced Tuesday to 10 years to life in prison for the crime.

William Harris, 33, and his 31-year-old wife smiled broadly as the sentences were read. The had plea-bargained Aug. 31, and officials said they could probably be released from prison in five years.

Boone aldermen urge water conservation

BOONE (AP)—This mountain college town is in the midst of a water crisis serious enough to prompt a town board resolution against car washing, lawn watering and other nonessential consumption of water.

The Board of Aldermen took the action at the urging of state engineer Terry Gross. Mayor Wade Wilmoth said town police would be looking for violators. Boone hasn't had a measurable rainfall since Aug. 8.

250 die in Beirut street battles

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP)—Flames and black clouds billowed over Beirut Tuesday as Syrians renewed their shelling of Christian sectors, ignoring pleas from Lebanese President Elias Sarkis to end the fighting that reportedly claimed 250 lives in six days.

In New York, U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim offered his office to help achieve a Lebanese cease-fire, and it was reported the United Nations was considering the evacuation of 301 U.N. dependents from Beirut.

Democratic leaders predicted in advance they could muster sufficient votes in Congress to override Carter's veto, but the president told reporters in his Oval Office he is determined to make it stick.

"It is important that I and the Congress set an example for the rest of the nation in controlling inflation. This public works bill is exactly the wrong example," Carter said.

"It's inflationary, it's wasteful, and it spends the taxpayers' money in a very inefficient and inappropriate way," the president said.

Among other things, he said the bill would force him to add 2,300 new employees to the federal payroll with an average salary of $25,000 for a total cost of $57 million—whether he thinks they are needed or not.

"I along with the people of our country are tired of seeing taxpayers' money wasted, and I am determined to see the fight against inflation succeed. That is why I'm going to veto this unreasonable bill," Carter said.

He said the veto officially would be carried out later in the week.

The president's impending veto is not expected to stop construction on the $10 million Jordan Lake project, a White House official said. The president objects to several water projects in the public-works bill, but Jordan Lake is not one of them, the official said.

SCAU: help wanted

The Student Consumer Action Union is looking for help—all kinds of it. Philip Garnier, housing chairperson, says he needs people to work on SCAU's guide to apartments, The Southern Part of Heaven? The booklet, which will come out after spring break, will be expanded this year to include information on mobile homes, Odum Village and helpful hints on living in houses, including the names of realtors. The accuracy of Room to Live, the guide to dormitory life, will also be investigated.

Investigations of apartment issues in town and discrimination cases also are in the plans this year. Garnier said the problem is to find out why there is not enough room for everyone to live. "The current housing crunch and building moratorium are not compatible," he said.

Anyone interested in helping with surveys and compilation of the booklet should contact Garnier in the SCAU office located in Suite B, upstairs in the Carolina Union.

SCAU vice chairperson Dan Coleman also is looking for help on a new guide to Chapel Hill night life, which will compare prices, music styles and types of beer on tap in area bars.

Also needed are people interested in working on a newsletter describing SCAU activities and providing information on student complaints.

All persons interested in any of these projects or having suggestions should contact the SCAU office. No experience is necessary.

Merchants group says no to Christmas decorations

This Christmas season in Chapel Hill may not be as bright as those in years past.

The town's lighted Christmas decorations have been turned down by the town appearance commission. The Chapel Hill-Carrboro Merchants Association has decided not to suggest alternative decorations, said Louis Marchisio, interim director of the association.

Lamar Cecil, an appearance commission member, made the motion to reject the proposed decorations in a recent meeting of the commission.

"I think the decorations are tacky," Cecil said. "They (the Merchants Association) were supposed to meet with us when the selection was made. I don't think we should use lighted decorations, especially when we are trying to conserve energy."

Although the Merchants Association notified the commission of the selection meeting one day in advance, none of the commission members could attend the meeting because of other obligations.

"They should have notified us earlier," Cecil said. "Christmas comes at the same time every year."

Marchisio said the Merchants Association will concentrate its time on the Christmas parade this year.

The appearance commission only recommends rejection of the decorations to the Chapel Hill Board of Aldermen. The issue will not reach the aldermen unless the Merchants Association decides to contest the issue.

The proposed decorations were lanterns surrounded by wreaths and containing electric candles.
