

Human rights group pleased with Hunt

RALEIGH (AP)—Members of the N.C. Human Relations Council are pleased with Gov. Jim Hunt's response to their recommendations on minority representation in education, voter registration, fair housing and fair employment.

The council's chairperson, the Rev. Jerry Drayton of Winston-Salem, presented the resolutions Thursday. Four other members were present at the afternoon meeting with Hunt.

Hunt asked that a letter be sent to the N.C. Board of Elections to investigate increasing voter registration in counties where it is low, according to Henry McKoy, director of the council. McKoy said the council is concerned with low registration in several counties where blacks outnumber whites.

In response to the council's concern for equal housing opportunity, Hunt asked McKoy to prepare a report outlining the specific recommendations by the council.

Hunt suggested that the council form a task force, including business executives and other community representatives, to explore the possibility of proposing a fair employment practices bill to the General Assembly.

In its resolution, the council cited an "absence of a strong enforceable state law on employment discrimination," and asked Hunt to propose such a law in his legislative package.

Finally, Hunt made two proposals regarding minority representation on education boards and in schools and colleges. The governor agreed to write a letter to the chairperson of the N.C. Board of Education asking that the council be allowed to present its research on minority representation in education to the board.

The research is based on a study by the UNC Institute of Government that shows the percentage of black pupils vs. the percentage of black personnel is low in some counties.

Hunt also asked the council to send letters to local human relations directors across the state asking them to meet with citizens and boards of education to promote minority representation in education.

"The chairman (Drayton) said he was pleased with the outcome of the meeting," McKoy said. "And the governor said he was pleased with the work the council has been doing."

Carter signs energy legislation

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Carter signed a weakened version of his energy plan into law Thursday after an 18-month political struggle with Congress. "We have acquitted ourselves well as a nation," Carter declared at a White House signing ceremony.

He said the energy plan will enable the United States to save 2½ million barrels of oil per day by 1985. "This is not as great as the original goal, but it is a substantial basis on which to predicate future achievements," he added.

Anti-test group to continue battle

DURHAM (AP)—Leaders of the North Carolina Coalition for Quality Education said Thursday they will continue a battle against the state's high school competency testing program and plan to file a suit after test scores are released.

The tests were administered for the first time last week to high school juniors across the state. Some blacks have charged that the examinations are racially biased and should not be required for a high school diploma.

50 arrested in Grand Slam roundup

CHESAPEAKE, Va. (AP)—Fifty people were arrested Thursday in the aftermath of Operation Grand Slam, the fourth in a series of Tidewater undercover fencing operations conducted by local, state and federal authorities.

A special grand jury this week returned 157 indictments against 71 people, including 18 juveniles, charged with selling stolen goods to law officers manning a bogus thrift shop in Foundation Park.

Pope reaffirms ban on marriage

VATICAN CITY (AP)—Pope John Paul II has reaffirmed the 1,500-year-old ban on marriage for priests in his first pronouncement on one of the most controversial issues facing the Roman Catholic Church.

Celibacy is believed to be a main cause for the defection of priests, which has risen worldwide from about 1,000 in 1965 to an annual rate of about 4,000—1 percent of the world's 400,000 priests. In the United States, it is estimated that more than 8,000 Roman Catholic priests have resigned since 1965.

Election returns may be bagged

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP)—Control of Pennsylvania's 203-member House of Representatives may be decided by a lottery after Democrats and Republicans each won 101 seats and the remaining race ended with each candidate getting 8,551 votes. If a recount still shows a tie, Republican challenger Donald Moul and incumbent Democrat Kenneth Cole will pull a number out of a bag, with the winner being the man who picks the lowest number.

Political observers figure that the eventual outcome will be a court challenge, which conceivably could drag on for months or even years.

Nyerere charges Amin with lying

DAR ES SALAAM, Tanzania (AP)—President Julius Nyerere said Thursday that Ugandan President Idi Amin's recent offer to withdraw his invading troops from Tanzania was a lie.

Nyerere said the offer was aimed at making the Ugandan leader look like a lover of peace and Nyerere look like a lover of war.

Ugandan troops invaded northwestern Tanzania earlier this month and annexed 710 square miles of territory. Sketchy reports of the fighting between forces of the two black-ruled east African neighbors have come from official Ugandan and Tanzanian sources and there has been no independent confirmation.

Nyerere made the accusation against Amin after summoning all African ambassadors to Tanzania to his ocean-side statehouse. He told them Amin had carefully prepared for the invasion of Tanzania by using Western news media.

Porno king arrested in Connecticut bank

ATLANTA (AP)—Fugitive pornography kingpin Mike Thevis, one of the FBI's 10 most wanted criminals, was captured Thursday in Bloomfield, Conn., the FBI said.

James Dunn, FBI special agent in charge, said local police and federal agents arrested Thevis on Thursday morning in a Bloomfield bank along with a Marietta, Ga., woman identified by police as Jeanette Evans.

Dunn said authorities had the bank under surveillance after questions were raised about a large amount of money coming in and out of an account.

Thevis was not disguised, and looked just like his photograph on FBI wanted posters, Dunn said.

Neither he nor his companion offered any resistance, Dunn said. Thevis at first identified himself as Arby Evans but admitted his true identity under questioning, the agent said.

The FBI said agents believed Thevis had been in the Bloomfield vicinity for about a week.

Evans, described as an Atlanta real estate agent, was charged with harboring a fugitive, Dunn said.

Thevis, who walked out of an unlocked side door of a county jail in Indiana last April, was indicted two months later on federal racketeering charges that accused him of building his empire of peep shows and X-rated bookstores on murder, arson and extortion.

Although federal authorities considered Thevis an escape risk, he was allowed unlimited telephone calls and at least one unsupervised trip outside the New Albany, Ind., jail, newspaper reports said. A grand jury report said he was given opportunities for sexual relations with his girlfriend, Patricia McLean.

McLean was charged with aiding Thevis' escape. Her trial was scheduled to begin this week in Atlanta, but was postponed and ordered moved out of Georgia because of widespread publicity about the slaying of a key witness against Thevis, Roger Dean Underhill.

Underhill, described by prosecutors as instrumental in the charges pending against Thevis, was gunned down last month in broad daylight while showing some north Atlanta property to a prospective buyer.

Federal prosecutors had asked for permission to preserve Underhill's testimony, fearing an assault on his life, but it was not done before the slaying.

On Thursday, government attorneys began taking testimony in closed session from another former Thevis associate, Leon Walters.

A grand jury in Atlanta indicted Thevis last June under the federal Racketeering Influenced and Corrupt Organizations statute, accusing him of two murders in Atlanta of former subordinates-turned-rivals, extortions in Fayetteville, Nashville, Tenn., New Orleans, Louisville, Ky., and Houston, and several attempts to murder Walters.

A separate count accuses Thevis, several attorneys and a doctor of attempting to fix a reduction of sentence hearing in New Orleans by bribery and by perjured testimony about Thevis' health.

The son of Greek immigrant parents, Thevis hitchhiked to Atlanta as a teenager and started his empire with a single bookstore.

In a 1971 interview, he described the start of his pornography empire. "I sensed that something was happening with reader demands in the early 1960s. Books that dealt with sex don't stay on the shelves very long," he said.

"So don't come at me with the business that I created the demand for sex books or sex magazines. The public, certain portions of it at least, created the demand."

By the early 1970s, authorities called him the biggest operator of pornographic businesses in the country. His business was so effective that the same grand jury that handed down the racketeering indictment also charged Thevis with anti-trust violations.
