Heels finish season 12-3-4

Plenty of defense but little scoring for booters

By BILL FIELDS
Staff Writer

Defense, defense and more defense — the Tar Heel soccer team had plenty of that this season.

Goals, goals and fewer goals — UNC also found out that a good defense will not pull a team through every time.

It was a lack of scoring punch which kept UNC from posting a record better than the 12-3-4 record it finished with and which kept the Tar Heels out of the NCAA playoffs. Add that record to last season's mark and Coach Anson Dorrance is 26-6-5 for his first two years as coach.

Carolina closed its year last Saturday with a 2-1 win over Davidson, a game typical of the soccer Carolina played all season since opening on the road against UNC-Charlotte in early September. Lots of good defense, scrappy play in the midfield, hustling play on the front line, capable play from the goalie — Carolina got all of that this season.

The Tar Heels got everything but goals. Only twice did UNC explode offensively. Pfeiffer was the victim when Carolina went on a 10-goal rampage, and East Carolina caught the worst end of a 7-0 shutout.

But both of those games came late in the season after a number of low-scoring and even scoreless contests, in which just one goal would have been enough for a Carolina win. Scoreless ties against Guilford, Appalachian State, Lynchburg and Clemson dot UNC's record.

To the Tar Heel's credit, all four scoreless games were against top-ranked teams. Guilford and Lynchburg rank high in the small college division. Clemson and ASU hold national soccer reputations.

So it wasn't the ties, but the three losses which kept Carolina from a first-place tie with the Tigers for the ACC championship and an NCAA tournament bid.

UNC-Wilmington (a 4-1 winner), Duke (1-0), and Old Dominion (1-0) sealed Carolina's fate of being a runner-up in the ACC and a spectator of post-season action. The UNC-W loss came early in the year, and the Tar Heels were not hurt as badly by that one. But losing to Duke killed the ACC chances, and Old Dominion decided it wanted to be in the NCAA playoffs itself.

"It was an interesting year," Dorrance said after the Davidson game. "It was a difficult year, though, because of the injuries."

Ah, injuries. Soccer teams are supposed to get fewer and less serious ones than football teams, but Dorrance might argue that one.

First, Dick Drayton, a star on the 1977 team, did not even suit up for a single game. A severe knee injury kept him out. A knee injury hit Billy Propster early in the year and he watched from the sidelines.

Chris Brown, a sophomore, developed calcium deposits in his thigh and saw limited action early. Brown is red-shirted, and has an extra year of eligibility.

But Martin Trimble has no extra year left. Trimble, a senior who was All-ACC goalie his first three years, also fell victim to calcium deposits. He went out after the fourth game, and saw his last action in the second half of the Pfeiffer rout. "It was tough on him," Dorrance said. "He knew he wouldn't get back in, but he stuck with us, came to practice everyday."

It was also a disappointing season for Sean Naber. He never could get things going like he did last year when he led the team in scoring. Naber, too, was injured, receiving a shoulder separation against ASU. He was nagged with other minor injuries as was most of the UNC team.

"We were in a constant state of flux," Dorrance said. "I admire the players. They didn't know who would be starting week by week."

In between the injuries and around the ties and discounting the losses, Tar Heel soccer had plenty of bright moments.

Senior Steve Scott played the best soccer of his four-year career and led the team with eight goals. "I just wish I could play for a couple of more years," he said after his final game.

Seniors Roy Baroff, Ed Fenimore and Cooper Osborne played well in the midfield and the backline. Baroff's play was recognized by the Most Valuable Player award in the Mayor's Cup tournament early in the season.

Osborne, until the final game, had not seen a goal scored while he was on the field. Dorrance often called his feat one of the most notable on the team.

Fenimore anchored the defense at the sweeper position. He, Baroff, Scott and Trimble were four-year starters. "They made the difference in the close games," Dorrance said of the group.

The remaining two seniors, Butch Bernard and Tom Cope, didn't play very much, but Bernard scored three times, including one in his final game.

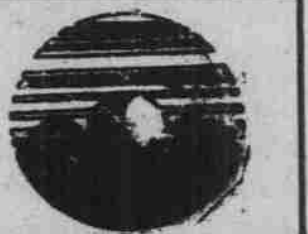

How about next year? "It's going to be hard to replace the seniors," Dorrance said. "We should be good. We have a lot of good people coming back, and the Jayvee team was good this year."

Live, and get Liv.

Treat yourself... to lyrics that flutter the heart. To a voice that triggers sighs and smiles. Livingston Taylor's new album, "3-Way Mirror" generates the kind of spirited, lifegiving qualities you would expect from an original.

Livingston's first album on Epic (and his first release in 5 years) contains nine Taylor made tunes, and one he's chosen to interpret. Backed up by Maria Muldaur on "No Thank You Skycap," Liv proves once again that the love song is alive and well and waiting to be heard. Livingston Taylor. Identifiably his own man.
