Why do the 'Time Warp'?
Prof to discuss movie cult

By DINITA JAMES
Staff Writer
It's jump to the left and a step to the right. Put your hands on your hips, and pull your knees in tight. And do the pelvic thrust...let's do the time warp again.
The cult phenomena that have developed from the Rocky Horror Picture Show, including dancing in the aisles, throwing rice and touching the screen while clothed as transvestites, will be discussed by Craig Calhoun, associate professor of sociology, at 7:30 p.m. today in 100 Hamilton Hall.
Calhoun, who said he will be speaking in "other than his usual lecturing clothes," said the topics he might discuss include teenage transvestism, extraterrestrial society, the time warp in popular culture, getting the audience involved in the performance and political apathy and cultural excitement.
Richard Cramer, sociology professor and publicist for the discussion, said Calhoun saw the movie four times and enjoyed it.
"Calhoun has a general interest in cultural society and popular culture, and how it reflects the changes in society over time," Cramer said. "He's made observations about the kinds of people that come to see it, and he will probably comment on why people behave the way they do in the theater."
Cramer said one of Calhoun's theories as to why the movie has caught on is the disillusionment young persons have for political life.
"The phenomena are substitutes for political involvement," he said. "People are turned off by what's going on in the world so they turn on to something like this. It's just another outlet."
Cramer said he feels it is possible a large number of cultists will attend the lecture in costume, but the program will be a sociological discussion rather than entertainment.
Calhoun will have recordings of some of the music from the movie, and refreshments of the "non-throwable variety," will be served.

Editor, writer at age 12, frosh seeks time to study

DURHAM (AP)—While most college freshmen anxiously await their grades on their latest exams, Duke freshman John Maltese is waiting to read the latest reviews of his books.
Last spring, a musical publishing firm put out a book, edited by 18-year-old Maltese, about Andrew Benoit. He edited The Accompanist: An Autobiography of Andrew Benoit while taking time off from his major project, a book on Watergate.
Maltese also has published two book chapters, a magazine article and a record album insert.
Maltese, of Jacksonville, Ala., began writing and editing when he was 12 and had published works when he was 14.
He said his book on Watergate will be mainly a reference of what information is available. He is cross-referencing all the books and articles that deal with Watergate so researchers can find all that has been written about each Watergate conversation.
"I started out indexing for myself," Maltese said. "Most of the books have no index so you have to read the whole book to find reference to a particular conversation."
While he was working on his Watergate book, Maltese received the offer to edit The Accompanist.
"I didn't want to do it at first," Maltese said. He said he was concerned that it would take too much time from his Watergate research.
"My parents pointed out the advantage to having something published at the age of 16 and said that might help me find a publisher for the Watergate book," Maltese said. "So I looked over one of the manuscripts and decided to go ahead with it."
Maltese took on the editing job during "two very hectic months one summer" while vacationing with his family in New York.

The offer to edit the book was the result of Maltese's previous work—a musical bibliography on violinist Jascha Heifetz.
"I've always liked to compile information and do research," Maltese said. "And I have always made lists. My father had quite an extensive amount of information about Heifetz. I just went through and listed it."
He later revised and added to the original bibliography, and the revised version was reproduced in the record album by Heifetz.
Maltese said his main problem is finding enough time for studying. "I haven't told any of my professors about the book," Maltese said. "I'm afraid they might think I should do more."
Poets to read
Ann Deagon and Shelby Stephenson, members of the North Carolina Poetry Society, will read from their works at 8 tonight at the Art School, 150 E. Main St., Carrboro.
Deagon, a UNC graduate, teaches classics at Guilford College. She is the author of several volumes of poetry, including Women and Children First and There is No Balm in Birmingham.
Stephenson is the author of Middle Creek Poems. His poetry also has appeared in Poetry Now, International Poetry Review and Appalachian Review.
This reading is part of the Art School's continuing "Poets Exchange."
