New Ms. BSM crowned at ball

By DONNA WHITAKER Staff Writer

Amidst the dim lights, mellow music and semi-formal atmosphere of the BSM Coronation Ball Saturday night in the Great Hall, the Ebony Readers/Onyx Theatre, BSM Gospel Choir and Opeyo Dancers honored Rox Fuze, Ms. BSM 1979-80. Fuze was crowned by UNC student Karen Cuthrell, Miss Black North Carolina 1979.

The Ebony Readers, under the direction of Rox Fuze, centered their performances around the ball's theme: "Black Woman."

The Readers took the audience from the black woman's early childhood to her struggle as a cosmopolitan adult, with selection from popular songs and works by black writers. They very effectively showed how some black women can become lonely and frustrated with the pressures of being both a woman and a black American.

In one moving scene, the three male members of the ninemember group paid a special tribute to the strength and courage of black women.

The BSM Gospel Choir sang "Get back Satan," featuring Marlon West as soloist, and "Trying To Make Heaven My
