Maryland's shooters began hitting from all over the court while the Terps' packed-in-zone closed off Carolina's inside game as Maryland pulled out to a 44-38 halftime lead.

This was a big win for us," Driesell said. "It gives us a three-game lead in the league."

"I'm just so proud of the kids. We were picked to finish sixth in the league and now we've beaten the team picked to be No. 1 twice. It just shows what a great effort they put forth."

Wood led Carolina scorers with 27 points, including 17 in the first half. O'Koren followed with 18 points and fouled out with five seconds to play.

Albert King led Maryland with 20 points, including four points on one-and-one situations in the last 14 seconds. King, who played all 40 minutes, said of the last play, "It was a gamble that just paid off."

Wrestlers try to extend streak

From Staff Reports

The North Carolina wrestling team will attempt to extend its undefeated streak to 22 consecutive dual meets when it takes on the Syracuse Orangemen at 3 p.m. Sunday in Carmichael Auditorium.

The Tar Heels are 8-0 this year, 5-0 in the Atlantic Coast Conference, and have not lost a dual meet since a one-point defeat to Navy last year.

UNC wrestling coach Bill Lam said the streak did not add any pressure to his wrestlers. "The streak doesn't mean anything," he said. "We just take each dual meet one at a time."

Lam said the Tar Heels are ready to move up from their 19th position in the national rankings. "We've beaten Penn State and Navy. We beat Auburn in the Carolina Invitational and they're ranked tenth," Lam said.

The UNC fencing teams travel to New York this weekend, stepping outside of the tough Atlantic Coast Conference to battle two powerful non-conference foes.

team continues to improve and has fended well enough against strong teams like Maryland and Clemson to serve notice that they will have to be considered with at the tournament.

The women were extremely strong against Virginia last weekend, winning 16-0 and having only 15 touches scored against them the entire match. The men also defeated Virginia, 21-6, but lost a tough match to Clemson 15-12.

In other Tar Heel sports action this weekend, the men's swim team meets Duke at 7:30 Saturday night in Durham. Both men's and women's track teams are in action, with the men going against Duke, Wake Forest and Western Carolina, and the women competing against St. Augustine's Saturday in the new Tin Can.

Weekend Preview

The Tar Heels will fence Columbia and Pennsylvania, two Ivy League schools with rich fencing traditions.

Things have been going fairly well for the men's team, even though the Tar Heels have suffered three ACC losses.

Daniel twins Carolina's dynamic duo

By BERT WOODARD
Staff Writer

Carolina has a twin athletic act that makes the Gabors and Sister Sledge look dull.

Marla and Carla Daniel, sophomores from Wilmington, both excel in their respective sports at UNC. Carla is one of coach Dot Gunnell's most promising golfers and Marla finished the cross country season as coach Hubert West's second-ranked runner and will run track this spring.

To add an even more interesting twist to their already unique story, the Daniel twins room together—and like it. They decided to room together this year because they "knew what the other one would be like" as opposed to a pot-luck roommate, and because it was easier on their parents. "They got tired of calling two rooms long distance," Marla said.

Each girl's success hasn't surprised the other. They've worked hard, Carla said—Marla running 5-10 miles a day this summer, and Carla spending her time traveling to golf tournaments.

The result of such hard work is success. Marla, along with Nancy Radford and Cindy Appen, represented UNC in last fall's AIAW Southern Region II meet in Murray, Ky. She finished 33rd, but her time of 18:31 was a personal best for her on the 5,000-meter course.

"I knew she could do it," Carla said of her sister's emergence as Carolina's second-ranked runner in her first year of cross country. Marla ran track last spring and was encouraged by her teammates to compete in cross country. Carla, who almost signed with N.C. State on a track scholarship, had one of the lowest scoring averages on the women's golf team in the fall and will be counted on this spring for good scores.

The girls' unique story began like any other average North Carolina sisters. Having a sports-minded father and a close-knit group of neighborhood friends, the two started playing sports at an early age. By the ninth grade, they were participating in golf, basketball, softball and track. Marla chose track because she was "naturally better at it," and Carla opted for golf because she "got tired of running in high school."

The two still occasionally compete against one another and the outcome keeps their respective reputations intact. "I am not in good enough shape to keep up with her, and she can't beat me in golf," Carla said.

Like most twins, Carla and Marla have different personalities. Marla cross-stitches "when it is convenient." Carla, however, "doesn't have the patience for knitting" and therefore jogs in her free time.

Unfortunately, they don't have much of that, because like most student athletes, they are studying, practicing, resting or traveling. "There's not much time to mess around," Marla said.

Both girls see their athletic endeavors as outlets to participate in something productive and to learn something they can do the rest of their lives.

"If we weren't playing varsity sports, we'd be into something else—like intramurals or clubs sports," Carla said.
