

Drama abounds in Triangle area

The Triangle area is overflowing with theatrical productions this week which range in style and material from Shakespearean tragedy to modern comedy.

The Playmakers Repertory Theatre will open its production of Shakespeare's Othello at 8 p.m. Thursday in the Paul Green Theatre. This tragedy traces the poisoning of a chaste love by misinformed jealousy and suspicion. Performances will run Tuesdays through Sundays until March 2. Shows are at 8 p.m. with an added Sunday matinee at 2 p.m. The Moor will be played by Nuba-Harold Stuart, a New York based actor. Robert Burke, who has performed with Charlton Heston and Deborah Kerr, will portray the evil Iago. Desdemona will be played by Phyllis Somerville.

The Art School will continue its run of John Guare's The House of Blue Leaves at 8 p.m. Friday through Sunday in the Gallery Theatre in Carr Mill. This play is about dreams and the attempts of people to realize aspirations.

Also in Chapel Hill, Hal Holbrook will recreate his famous characterization of writer Mark Twain in Mark Twain Tonight! at 8 p.m. Sunday in Memorial Hall.

The Durham Theatre Guild will continue its presentation of the comedy Steambath in the Durham Arts Council Building.

Stuart plays Othello in local play

Performances of this play, which deals with the confrontation between people in a steam bath in New York, will be at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday and 2:30 p.m. Sunday.

The Duke Players will open their production of French playwright Jean Anouilh's farce Ring Around the Moon Thursday. Performances will continue through March 2.

Raleigh's Theatre in the Park will perform Ira David Woods' Eros and Illinois tonight through Friday. Wozzeck, by Buchner, will be presented by N.C. State students and deaf actors from the North Carolina Theatre of Gesture tonight through Saturday in Thompson Theatre on the NCSU campus.

NCCU festival to offer variety of theater types

North Carolina Central University's dramatic art department will host the Black College Theatre Festival Feb. 20-23. The festival brings to Durham major productions from four college and community drama groups as part of the university celebration of Black History Month.

The LaVerne Players of Raleigh will perform William Handley's Slow Dance On the Killing Ground tonight. Friendship Junior College of Rock Hill, S. C. will present Jean-Paul Sartre's No Exit Thursday. Raleigh's Shaw University will perform the musical Purlie based on the Ossie Davis play Friday. The festival will close Saturday with two one-act plays, The Owl Killer and The Sirens, produced by Bennet College of Greensboro.

All performances begin at 8:15 p.m. in NCCU's University Theatre.

Adult Festival tickets (admission to all four plays) are $5. Tickets for individual performances are $2.50 in advance and $3 at the door.
