Olympians travel to White House

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Carter welcomed members of the U.S. Winter Olympics team to the White House Monday, calling them "modern-day American heroes."

With the Marine Band playing the Olympic theme, the athletes climbed the steps to the south balcony of the White House where they were greeted by the president and Mrs. Carter and Mrs. Walter Mondale.

Carter shook hands with all the athletes but also gave a big hug to Eric Heiden, the speed skater who won five gold medals during the just-completed Games.

After receiving the athletes, Carter told a group of spectators on the South Lawn, "For me as president of the United States, this is one of the proudest moments I have ever experienced."

Tobacco deal made with China

WINSTON-SALEM (AP)—R.J. Reynolds Tobacco International Inc. and the People's Republic of China have signed an agreement calling for the manufacture and sale of Camel filter cigarettes in China.

The agreement, the first such venture between an international tobacco company and China, also provides for the development of a new, jointly owned brand to be sold in the Far East.

Under the contract, Camel filters will be produced in China with equipment supplied by Reynolds Tobacco International. Initially, the brand will be manufactured with tobacco supplied by the United States and will use the same blend as Camel filter in America.

Ingram criticizes former aides

WINSTON-SALEM (AP)—State Insurance Commissioner John Ingram said Monday that personnel problems plaguing his department were caused by aides who were ambitious to take over his job.

W. Kenneth Brown, Roy Rabon and James Long are three former deputies who are running against Ingram in the primary election. They are among seven deputies who have either quit or been fired by the insurance commissioner since he took office in 1973.

N.C. seeks to offset rationing

RALEIGH (AP)—North Carolina transportation and tourism officials are looking for ways to offset possible gasoline rationing that could affect tourist travel in the state.

Dan Roth, new state director of travel and tourism, said one of the ideas being discussed to fight President Carter's rationing plan is a statewide gasoline advisory phone line.

He said the transportation department is preparing for the possibility of rationing this summer.

out. Many left crying, and of the people who did get back in, few were happy because they had friends who were closed out.

"Personally, I think it's absurd that they're spending more money and building a library and adding onto the Union when there aren't enough places to live," said Alexandra McMillan, a freshman Alexander resident.

"I don't even know if we'll be able to find an apartment now. I just don't know what I'm going to do."

"It really does burn me up that there's no guaranteed housing, and I think that's unfair," she said.

Vicki Boyette, a freshman Alexander resident, said, "I don't have any idea about what I'm going to do. I cannot afford an apartment."

Students who do plan to look for an apartment can get help by attending seminars on finding alternative housing. They will be held at 7 p.m. March 11 and 12 in the Great Hall of the Carolina Union.

"Closeout" packets will be available at the seminars. They contain the Student Consumer Action Union's booklet, The Southern Part of Heaven, a guide to off-campus housing, along with the Association of Apartment Dweller's Guide to Apartment Dwelling. Bus and bike route maps and apartment rent information will also be included. Those materials are also available at the Union desk.

Professor of philosophy keeps time

By BETSI SIMMONS
Staff Writer

Skepticism concerning the existence of the past is one of several unique topics that UNC philosophy Professor George Schlesinger discusses in his recently published book, Aspects of Time.

"How do we know the world is not just five minutes old?" he asks in his book. "Let's say we sprang into being five minutes ago with all sorts of memories of the past that aren't real."

Most of his students just laugh the first time they hear the hypothesis. But the more they think about it, the more they realize they cannot argue against it, Schlesinger said.

Another chapter in Aspects of Time deals with backward causation, a term he defines as "doing something today that would cause something to happen yesterday."

Schlesinger said he believes these are problems worth pondering and everyone should take an interest in them because they deal with the most fundamental questions about the nature of reality.

Schlesinger, a 1975 recipient of the Tanner Award for "excellence in inspirational teaching," has worked on the book for many years to correspond with Philosophy 121, a course he teaches on the philosophy of time.

The book, which is available at the

George Schlesinger

UNC Student Store, is divided into three parts: the text, a section of questions and objections and finally, the answers, Schlesinger said.

"This device is unique," he said. "In philosophy, one puts forward an argument, then an objection, then counter-arguments and counter-objections. This could go on forever and only confuse the argument."

Breaking the text into sections is a considerable help to students, Schlesinger said. "I do care about students, in fact I make frantic efforts to help students to understand."

"It's uphill work to make students interested in something that is purely intellectual and absolutely impractical," he added.

Schlesinger, a native of Hungary, did his undergraduate work at London University and his doctoral work at the University of Melbourne in Australia.

Bani-Sadr asks Iran to unify in resistance

The Associated Press

Thousands of Iranians paraded through rain and snow past the occupied U.S. Embassy in Tehran on Monday and President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr told them from atop the compound wall they must stay united in the face of potential foreign threats.

Machine gun-armed Moslem militants marched back and forth in the courtyard of the embassy, where about 50 American hostages spent their 114th day in captivity.

Bani-Sadr's appearance, part of Iran's "Mobilization Week" ceremonies, was his first at the embassy since he was elected president Jan. 25.

In an interview published earlier Monday, he praised the militants who have held the embassy and hostages since Nov. 4 as "young patriots." And he made no mention of the release of the hostages in either the interview or speech.

But he did tell the interviewer for the Hong Kong Star newspaper that the militants must respect the lawful authorities.

The five-member United Nations investigative commission on Iran heard testimony in Tehran on Monday from top Iranian jurists about alleged human rights violations under the regime of the deposed Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi.

The U.S. government said it had understood that the U.N. fact-finding mission would lead to the release of the hostages, but the Iranians insist there is no such connection. Revolutionary leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini said during the weekend that any decision on the hostages must await the election and convening of a new Parliament, not expected until April at the earliest.

In New York, a spokesman said U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim feels the commission is making progress. "The secretary-general is confident all these efforts will lead to final solution of the crisis," said spokesman Rudolf Stajduhar. "Obviously more patience is needed."

People watching the militants parade inside the embassy grounds Monday chanted anti-American slogans and held Khomeini posters aloft. Bani-Sadr appeared on a platform on top of the wall surrounding the compound with other members of the Revolutionary Council and representatives of the embassy militants.

"What is happening in Afghanistan today teaches us that our people must make themselves ready to defend the country," Bani-Sadr told the crowd, referring to the Soviet military intervention in neighboring Afghanistan.

After the president's brief speech, spokesmen for the militants addressed the crowd and accused the United States of trying to destroy the Islamic revolution. They said the United States will eventually be obliged to return the deposed shah to Iran.

Palestinians protest ambassador exchange

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP)—Palestinian Arabs in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip on Monday called for general strikes to protest the exchange of ambassadors between Israel and Egypt.

The ambassadors-designate of the two reconciled enemies are to present their credentials formally Tuesday, an event which President Carter, in Washington, called a dream come true.

"We will make this day a black day," said a statement by the Gaza town council after an emergency meeting. "This shall be our answer to the exchange of ambassadors."

Egyptian Defense Minister Kamal Hassan Aly arrived in Israel to discuss with Israeli Defense Minister Ezer Weizman the establishment of normal ties between the two countries. At the airport to meet him was Egyptian Ambassador-designate Saad Murtada, who will present his credentials to President Yitzhak Navon in Jerusalem.

Israel's ambassador-designate to Egypt, Eliahu Ben-Elissar, flew to Cairo on Sunday and will present his credentials to President Anwar Sadat.

In the Israeli-occupied West Bank of the Jordan River a small bomb went off at the Tomb of the Patriarchs in Hebron, the focus of tension between Jewish settlers and Palestinians. No injuries were reported. Commercial strikes and minor school disturbances were reported in several towns.

Israeli security forces have been on heightened alert to prevent terrorist attacks aimed at disrupting the ambassadorial exchange.

The future of Arabs in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip, territories Israel has occupied since the 1967 Middle East War, is being worked out in the continuing Palestinian autonomy negotiations.

Israel, Egypt and the United States are trying to reach a settlement on the nature and extent of self-rule to be granted to the Palestinian Arabs, under terms of the Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty signed last March.

The State Department announced that the Carter administration has agreed to arm Egypt with 40 F-16 jet fighter planes and 250 M-60 tanks. The arms package, which has been in the works for some time, will require congressional approval.

State Department spokesman Hodding Carter stressed that all the U.S. arms would be bought under a credit arrangement. He said he did not know if Saudi Arabia, which has bankrolled other Egyptian arms purchases, will help pay for the new weapons.

In Khartoum, the Sudanese Press Association called on Arab countries to declare a day of national mourning when Egypt and Israel exchange ambassadors.

The Sudanese government, under pressure from hard-line Arab countries, has backed down from its initial support of the peace treaty.

Holbrook

entrance, laughter—both cynical and light-hearted—rippled through the UNC crowd.

Holbrook shuffled out on stage, in his three-piece khaki suit, smiling and began to speak in a high-pitched gravelly voice. "I'm always very sad to see myself advertised as a great writer. They always have the habit of dying off..." he reflected a moment and said, "Chaucer is dead, Milton is dead. So is Shakespeare...and I haven't been feeling too good myself lately."

Having a repertoire of 57 monologues, taken from various written material and speeches of Twain, Holbrook proceeded to pick and choose among them, following his inspiration.

He said afterward, "I don't plan my movements. I don't plan to pick up something at a certain time—purposefully. To me the thing you try to achieve in acting is spontaneity—the feeling that you're just making it up. Within a framework you can allow anything to happen."

In his Sunday night performance, Holbrook chose about 20 monologues which ranged in origin from Huckleberry Finn to Twain's own notebook.

"Do you mind if I smoke?" he asked in his folksy manner. Holbrook has perfected the mannerisms of the 70-year-old author. For the next 20 minutes, Holbrook pressed home his points with the smoldering match used to light the cigar. The pungent aroma of the cigar beautifully matched the pungency of Twain's humor.

Holbrook basked in the vitality of each anecdote, relishing its humor and carefully timing his speech so the audience would enjoy it as much as he.

He began with relating some of Twain's jobs as he had described them in Roughing It. While shoveling sand, Twain would often stop to reflect upon how to proceed and fall asleep "as happy as a martyr when the fire won't burn." His boss rebuked him. "I've seen quieter and lazier people in my life—but they're dead."

Twain asked him for a raise. "I knew that money was the root of all evil and I wanted every bit I could get." Twain soon was fired. After that, "a pawnbroker took care of all the property I had."

Twain's social commentary still retains its universal appeal. In his performance, Holbrook told a story of an anarchist who tried to commit suicide. With a pistol, "he shot a tunnel right through his brain...it changed his life...cleared all that gray matter out...and he was sent to Congress...yeah...he served two terms in Congress and one in the penitentiary...now that man is a respectable member of society again."

Holbrook was especially spellbinding in his dramatic presentation of a selection from Huckleberry Finn. In "Shooting of Boggs" a man commits murder then shames the crowd into not lynching him. It is a subtly explosive expose on the sadism and cowardice of small Southern communities of the time. They can only lynch people in the dark, wearing masks and abuse themselves by pouring turpentine on a stray dog and setting him on fire.

Holbrook creates a dense characterization here. He tells the story in a child's voice, tainted with the tenor of the elderly Twain's natural raspiness. The innocence of the naive Huck is laced with the ironies of the author.

No one, during Twain's day or now, is safe from the satire of the famous author.

"That's the fun of it," Holbrook said "to see if people can laugh at themselves." And the UNC audience certainly did.

t-board

"He (Saunders) was notified that a position was vacant," Collier said. "It was Bob's belief we should have a student on the board. We felt student input was vital."

But Cohen said two more seats will open up on the Transportation Board in June when two current members' terms expire. Cohen said if he gets the existing vacant seat he will push for a student appointment to one of the seats that will be open in June.

Collier again stressed the need for a student member on the board.

"Input is needed on issues like the proposed increase in bus pass prices," he said. "It's really the only official way the University and the students can have input."

Dealers dope N.C. coast

WILMINGTON (AP)—North Carolina has become one of the most popular points of entry for marijuana channeled to the rest of the country, largely because the state's smuggling laws are not tough enough.

"Whenever dope comes in here, it's already destined for somewhere else," said Detective Joel S. Smith of the Wilmington-New Hanover vice unit.

State Attorney General Rufus L. Edmisten said jail sentences for marijuana smuggling are much lower in North Carolina than for smuggling cocaine or other narcotics.

Edmisten said his office is preparing legislation for the 1981 session of the General Assembly that will toughen smuggling laws.

"I want the word to go out that if you deal drugs in North Carolina and you're caught and convicted, you're going to burn," he said.

Last year, nearly 3 million pounds of marijuana were seized along the North Carolina coast by the U.S. Coast Guard, State Bureau of Investigation, U.S. Customs Service and the Drug Enforcement Administration.

In 1978, 3.5 million pounds were seized, but even that figure is estimated by customs officials to be one-tenth of the amount that finds its way into the state each year.

Edmisten said the federal estimate is too high. He said less than 1 percent of the marijuana is seized.

Smugglers discovered the North Carolina coast four years ago, according to Gilbert A. Payette, Wilmington district patrol director for the Customs Service. He said the state's meandering coastline provides 3,375 miles of opportunity for boats to make entry.

Payette said a sparse population along the coast and relatively small local law-enforcement resources lower the chances that a smuggling operation will be detected.

One of the most successful drug-smuggling operations, known as the Black Tuna Gang, was stopped in May 1979. According to federal authorities, the gang did more than $300 million in business and supplied about one million pounds of marijuana during one 16-month period.

However, law officers say the end of the Black Tuna Gang hasn't meant the end of drug smuggling in North Carolina. "That was one Black Tuna but we have scores and scores of other similar organizations," said Edmisten. "There are so many of them we don't need to say they are connected to Black Tuna."

PHOTOGRAPHY CONTEST

Rules

- The contest is open to all amateur photographers who are 18 years old or older and/or are undergraduate or graduate students of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. Members of the staffs of any University of North Carolina Student Publications are not eligible. For the purposes of The Daily Tar Heel Photographic Contest, amateur photographers are defined as those photographers who do not support themselves or receive a large share of their personal income due to the sale of photographic services or images.
- Any subject matter is acceptable for entry. Entries will be judged on (A) Content, (B) Technical Quality—which includes cropping, contrast, sharpness and lack of flaws in developing and printing; and (C) Visual Impact.
- Entrants may submit a maximum of five (5) entries for each of the contest's two major categories provided each entry is accompanied by the entrant's name, address and phone number.
- CATEGORIES
  - BLACK AND WHITE
Entries must be black and white prints at least 8 x 10 inches and no larger than 11 x 14 inches. Prizes will be awarded for first, second and third places.
  - COLOR
Entries must be color prints at least 8 x 10 inches and no larger than 11 x 14 inches. Prizes will be awarded for first, second and third places.
  - BEST-IN-SHOW
All entries which meet the above qualifications will be considered for the award as "Best-In-Show."
- PRIZES
  - The First Place entry in either major category will be awarded a $75 gift certificate to be redeemed at a photographic store to be named by The Daily Tar Heel.
  - The Second Place entry in either category will be awarded a $50 gift certificate.
  - The Third Place entry in either category will be awarded a $25 gift certificate.
  - The entry that is named "Best-In-Show" will receive a $100 gift certificate. No entry can win both "Best-In-Show" and First Place in either category.
  - Honorable mention in both the Black and White and Color categories will be named at the discretion of the judges.
- All entries will be judged by a panel of judges selected by The Daily Tar Heel. The decision of the judges will be final.
- All winning entries must be mounted by the entrants for display after selection. Winning entries will be displayed at Foister's Camera Store and University Mall.
- All entries must reach The Daily Tar Heel office no later than March 14, 1980.
- Winners will be required to submit the original negatives or slides of the winning photographs before the prizes are awarded. Failure to comply with this rule may result in disqualification.
- The Daily Tar Heel* will not be responsible for any claim or complaint from models used in winning photographs. Such responsibility is deemed to be that of the entrant. If necessary The Daily Tar Heel may request the entrant concerned to submit a release statement signed by the model before the prize is awarded.
- Non-winning entries may be picked up at The Daily Tar Heel office during regular office hours. Winners will be notified when they may pick up their entries.
- All possible care will be taken in handling all entries. The Daily Tar Heel will not assume responsibility for loss or damage of any entries.
- In the event an award-winning photograph is later found to have violated any contest rule, The Daily Tar Heel reserves the right to take any action it may deem suitable, including the return of the prize or prizes awarded. Also, the winning position will be voided.

Foister's Camera Store, 133 East Franklin St. and Photosynthesis, University Mall have graciously provided the gift certificates for The Daily Tar Heel Photographic Contest which will be awarded to winners.
