

Fee breakdown planned for inclusion in fall bills

If you ever wondered exactly what your student fees were used for, you won't have to wonder anymore.

A breakdown of student fees will be inserted with student bills this fall. The breakdown will show a schedule of fees for undergraduates and graduate students.

Wayne R. Jones, associate vice chancellor of finance, said last week that Student Government requested the administration to include the breakdown of fees with the student bills.

"We felt it was a reasonable request and something that should be done," Jones said. "We have received an increasing number of requests for this information recently, and we felt it should be provided to everyone."

Jeff Koeze, chairman of the Student Government Educational Policy Committee, said, "We (Student Government) wanted the breakdown because we thought students should know where their money was going and what fees were increasing."

"I don't think students are aware of fee increases and they don't note what fees are increasing," Koeze said.

The Opeyo Dancers, under the direction of Pamela Perkins, will present their annual spring recital at 8 p.m. Thursday in Memorial Hall.

A sub-group of the Black Student Movement, the group is comprised of 14 students—Denise Alston, Alvin Austin, Alfred Currie, Herb Farrish, Wilma Evans, Denece Fortune, Glenna Groomes, Dawn Kelly, Mary McElrath, Theresa Milliken, Pamela Perkins, Bonita Sherrod, Jane Taylor and Harold Woodward.

The ensemble has performed several concerts in Durham, Greensboro and Burlington as well as on the UNC-CH campus.

The Thursday program will include 10 dances, all composed by members of the group. "As far as I'm concerned," Perkins said, "they're all brilliant. Especially considering they have never had choreographing before."
