UNC athlete free on bond

Darrell Nicholson, starting linebacker for the UNC football team, is free on $500 bond as a result of charges of false pretense.

The arrest warrant was issued May 30 and Tuesday Nicholson appeared in court to waive his right to have assigned counsel. His case has been continued to June 17.

Nicholson, a rising junior, made 101 tackles and had 46 assists for the 1979 Gator Bowl champion Tar Heels. As a freshman he made 73 tackles with 54 assists.

In two years he has intercepted three passes, caused three fumbles—recovering one—and sacked the opposition 12 times behind the line of scrimmage.

The warrant claims that on May 18 Nicholson "did unlawfully, willfully, and feloniously and knowingly and designedly with the intent to cheat and defraud obtain U.S. currency having the value of $80."

The warrant went on to say that Nicholson obtained a check with the signature of Kenneth D. Mauney, wrote the date May 5, 1980, wrote the name Darrell Nicholson in the pay to the order of blank, made the check out in his name for $80 and endorsed it on the back. Mauney did not authorize the check, according to the warrant.

Nicholson's only previous offense on record is a car inspection violation in March which he paid. Head football coach Dick Crum could not be reached for comment.

Student Health may share facilities with Memorial Renovation work on part of N.C. Memorial Hospital may force some of that facility's inpatients into the Student Health Service building later this summer, officials said.

"The hospital wanted to rent some of our space temporarily while their renovation is going on," said Dr. James Taylor, director of Student Health Services. "They would rent part of an inpatient floor."

Taylor said the move would take place when it gets approval from the Division of Student Affairs, and when NCMH is far enough along in its remodeling project.

"We had been talking about something on the order of June to July through January or February (for the duration of occupancy by NCMH)," Taylor said. "That depends, of course on the approval of Student Affairs, and the time frame is just speculation on my part."

"I was supposed to hear something about it by the first of the month, but now that is past, and I haven't heard anything definite."

"If we can arrange it, I'd like to accommodate the hospital," said Donald Boulton, vice chancellor for Student Affairs. "It would be a good-neighbor thing, and it would mean some money for us."

"We're talking about 10 or 12 beds at one end of the building, so I think we'll be able to accommodate them," Boulton said.

"If we needed the space, they'd (NCMH) have to go," Taylor said.

"If we had an epidemic or something, we'd have to make some kind of (alternative) arrangement," Boulton said. "But as a hospital, their work has high priority."

Boulton said that patients moved to the Student Health Services building would be attended to by NCMH personnel.
