

The Tar Heel

Volume 89, Issue No. 45

Chapel Hill, North Carolina

Thursday, June 19, 1980

UNC to get new vice chancellor

By John Royster

UNC Chancellor Christopher C. Fordham III said Wednesday that he is working to put together an advisory committee to assist him in the selection of a vice chancellor.

Fordham also announced another selection to a search committee to recommend candidates for a University affirmative action officer, and said still another member of that committee would be named in the near future.

Fordham did not specify what department the vice chancellorship would be in. A vacancy currently exists in the position of vice chancellor for health affairs, the position Fordham held before taking over as chancellor in March.

Named to the affirmative action search committee was Thomas L. Isenhour, chairman of the chemistry department. Eight other people were named to the committee last week.

That committee will recommend candidates for the position of full-time affirmative action officer. Douglass Hunt currently serves as part-time affirmative action officer. The committee will be chaired by Madeline Levine, chairman of the department of Slavic languages.

The committee as named does not include a student representative, but the member still to be named is expected to be a student.

"The chancellor and I met and agreed that there should be a student representative," Student Body President Bob Saunders said. "I'll probably recommend a choice to him by the end of the week.

"It wasn't a deliberate omission. It (student representation) is something the chancellor strongly supports," Saunders said.

A search committee is formed to search for names, screen candidates, and submit recommended names to the appointing authority (Fordham), said Claiborne S. Jones, executive assistant to the chancellor.

An advisory committee differs from a search committee, Jones said, in that the appointing authority submits a list of possibilities to the committee.

The committee then recommends policy to the authority, Jones said.

Saunders said he expected the affirmative action committee to begin meeting soon. "We are actively selecting the people (candidates for the committee)," he said.

A public hearing on the affirmative action officer selection will be held July 1 from 3-5 p.m. in Dey Hall. Carol Williams of the affirmative action office said the public hearing was being held in an effort to get student input into the process.

Christopher C. Fordham

Faculty committees must review

Trustees to receive report on Stone tenure

By Jac Versteeg

The UNC board of trustees is expected to receive a special faculty committee report on Sonja H. Stone's tenure appeal Friday. However, in a move that comes as a surprise to Stone, the trustees will take no action on the report until it has been reviewed by two faculty committees.

Stone, assistant professor and former director of the African and Afro-American Studies curriculum, has been engaged in appeals since she first was denied tenure in 1979.

The next step in the appeal process will be a seven-member committee's presentation of its report to the trustees. The committee, headed by history professor George V. Taylor, was appointed by then-Chancellor N. Ferebee Taylor last December to review Stone's case.

Stone is appealing the University's decision not to renew her faculty appointment, not to grant tenure and not to promote her to associate professor.

She is charging the University with racism, sexism, violation of academic freedom, personal malice and violation of due process under law and equal protection under the law.

Ralph N. Strayhorn, chairman of the board of trustees, said Tuesday that the trustees will take no action on the report at their Friday meeting. Instead, Strayhorn said, the Taylor committee report will be forwarded to the Faculty Advisory Committee and the Instructional Personnel Committee for review and comment. Strayhorn said he has seen the report, but refused to comment on its context.

Stone, who is at Ohio State University on a nine-month research fellowship, said she was surprised the trustees did not plan to take immediate action on the Taylor committee report. "I was not aware of the procedures which were to be followed by the board of trustees until today," she said in a telephone interview Tuesday.

"I would be interested in knowing when the procedures were adopted by the board of trustees because, to my knowledge, there were no procedures before now," Stone said.

Strayhorn said the resolution sending the report to the faculty committees for review was adopted at a January meeting of the board of trustees.

Because Stone's tenure appeal is a personnel matter, the trustees will consider the Taylor committee's report in executive session, Strayhorn said. "I doubt the report will be made public either before or soon after Friday's meeting unless the board directs otherwise," Strayhorn said.

"It is only proper that the board neither comment nor

See STONE on page 3

Staff photo by Sharon Clarke

Pictured above is a lighthouse at Cape Hatteras. See pages 7-9 for related stories about the Outer Banks, fishing at the beach, the historic seaport of Beaufort and the art of surfing.

CGC appropriates funds for Friday event

By Bill Peschel

In an emergency meeting Monday, the summer Campus Governing Council appropriated money for an all-campus summer social event to be organized by Olde Campus and Henderson Residence College.

The CGC action came in response to student demand for funding to replace the defunct Summer Life program. The full CGC killed Summer Life in April, when it allocated no funds to it for this year.

The all-campus party to be held Friday night will be financed with $254.61 from campus radio station WXYC and $345.39 in unspent CGC funds.

A committee has been formed to look into alternatives for Summer Life for the second summer session.

WXYC's money comes from an illegal checking account set up two years ago. When present Station Manager Glenn Mitchell discovered the account, he reported it to the CGC.

At the same time, Barbara Buonaiuto, representing the residence halls, asked the council for money for a social event.

Mitchell objected to using WXYC's money as what he called "beer and pretzel money." He suggested the CGC donate the money to the Wesley Wallace professorship being established in the department of radio, television and motion pictures. He called it a worthwhile cause that Student Government may benefit from.

"Last week, we were very appreciative of them turning in the money," said summer CGC Finance Committee Chairman Tom Preston. "But we also decided not to let them get off the hook, and I think that is what we'll do if we follow their suggestion.

"Two hundred fifty-four dollars for a professorship is only going to go to one person...It will not make that much of a difference," Preston said.

"There is also no denying where the funds are coming from. I think this is a windfall for you (the CGC)," Mitchell said.

"I just think that $250 may not seem like much but this campus was built on $250 donations."

Student Body President Bob Saunders suggested that WXYC "use their legal funds" to make a donation.

"We don't have the slack in the budget to do that," Mitchell said.

One CGC member said Friday's social event might be held as a benefit for the Wallace Foundation.

In other business, the CGC gave the Black Student Movement $80 for publicity of its George Moses Horton Day festivities.

The July 14th celebration of the 19th century poet has been declared a state holiday for the last three years. The BSM celebration will feature speakers on Horton and black poetry.

Horton once worked in the UNC department of English.