

Devils, Heels earn soccer championships

By GEOFFREY MOCK
Staff Writer

Grasiano Giglio scored late in the first half and a tenacious Duke defense made that stand up as the Blue Devils defeated North Carolina's men's soccer team 1-0 in the finals of the third annual Mayor's Cup on Fetzer Field Sunday.

In the finals of the North Carolina Invitational Tournament Sunday morning at Fetzer, freshman Liz Phillips and sophomore Janet Rayfield combined for five goals to pace the UNC women's team to a 6-0 victory over Alabama.

It was the first Mayor's Cup championship for the Blue Devils, last year's runner-up to N.C. State. In addition to Giglio, the Blue Devil's heroes were goalie Boris Ilicic, who made several crucial saves late in the game, and defender Stephen Bond.

Despite the setback, the Tar Heels' first in five games, coach Anson Dorrance showed little disappointment. "Both teams played very well," he said. "We played flat, but for us to be flat and to still be in there is exciting."

Carolina had opportunities early in the action to score but could not find the range as shots strayed wide and high. "We had the chances throughout the game," Dorrance said. "We just couldn't convert. Duke played well and converted on its good chance."

The Tar Heels' last threat came with seven minutes left in the game when a John Boettigheimer shot was deflected off the upper right-hand post by the diving Ilicic. Seconds later, Steve Turner challenged but was stopped within the goalie's box by Bond.

Carolina's offense was led by Tony Johnson. "Tony was superb," Dorrance said. "He protected the ball well and helped out his teammates. He's a great player."

UNC has been explosive in recent outings, scoring 23 times in the last three games, but the Blue Devil defense simply shut it down. "We just got out of our game plan," Johnson said. "When we got down we couldn't do what we did against East Carolina."

In first-round games Saturday, the Tar Heels cruised to a 10-0 win over ECU with Johnson leading the way with two assists and a goal. Dorrance was able to substitute freely and let his starters rest as Carolina burst to a 4-0 lead after only 20 minutes.

In the other match Saturday, Duke upset 20th-ranked N.C. State 6-1, in a game marred by the ejection of three Wolfpack players.

Dorrance said he was pleased with how well the Mayor's Cup went in its first trip to Chapel Hill. "It's good soccer and it was supported by a good crowd. The score (1-0) shows the balance of the Atlantic Coast Conference."

The women had little trouble with Alabama. Phillips opened the scoring four minutes into the game by breaking into the right slot in front of the goal and taking a pass from Rayfield for the score. She followed the score minutes later with a goal off a header.

Rayfield added another first-half score and Phillips scored again early in the second half. Rayfield and Anne Ballinger added second-half scores to make it 6-0.

The Tar Heels ran away with tournament honors. Phillips was named the tournament MVP while Rayfield was voted the Most Valuable Offensive Player and Nancy Clary was Most Valuable Midfielder. Striker Ann Klas and defender Meg Mills made the All-Tournament team, in addition to the three.

"The women played their best game yet," Dorrance said. "Not only by the starters, but there was no drop in quality with the substitutions."

Losses from last year's team left a void in the offense that is quickly being filled. "With Phillips we'll be potent," Dorrance said. "She likes to go to the goal and she's very quick and agile."

The men resume action against High Point at 3:30 p.m. Wednesday in High Point. They return home for a big game vs. Appalachian State at 2 p.m. Saturday at Fetzer Field. The women are on the road this weekend for the Super Bowl '90 Tournament in Washington, D.C.

Bending defense becoming trendy

LUBBOCK, Texas—Whether the subject is khaki pants, bubbly water or a bendable football defense, people in Chapel Hill seem to be forever involved in a trend of one sort or another. In the case of the first two examples, one is in and the other is fizzing out. As for the flexible defense, Carolina players are all for it—as long as it keeps working.

The Tar Heels' 9-3 victory over Texas Tech of the Southwest Conference Saturday afternoon in a regionally televised game is the latest example of the trend-setting defense.

Let the opponent drive from its one to your two, but if he doesn't score any points in the process, don't worry about it.

"Bend but not break" has become a cliché.

Bill Fields

"I think you judge a defense by the way it performs under adversity," defensive coordinator Denny Marcini said after the game. "And our defense played pretty well under those conditions."

For instance:

- In the Furman game last week and in the Tech game, the Carolina defense allowed 16 points, but the defense can be held accountable for just nine, those coming on three field goals. The touchdown in the Furman game came on a fumble recovery by the Paladin defense.

- Against Texas Tech, the defense allowed 302 total yards, including 191 through the air by quarterback Ron Reeves. But on third-down plays, the Red Raiders made just 5-of-16 conversions.

- Carolina continued to play better in the second half defensively than at the beginning of the game. Just as the Furman offense clicked early, Tech's did, too. But after a talk at halftime that urged the defense to make the pass rush more effective, Reeves' passing efficiency dimmed. After throwing for 121 yards in the first half, Reeves got 70 yards in the last two quarters.

- Excellent individual plays by defensive players are a key. Steve Streeter and Darrell Nicholson both had interceptions against the Raiders, while Lawrence Taylor made a key tackle to force and recover a fumble. All stopped Tech drives, with Streeter's catch stopping a touchdown.

UNC's Tyress Bratton and Calvin Daniels

"We told our defense at halftime that what they had to do is get the ball for the offense," Marcini said. "If they can give the offense the ball in good shape, that helps. It's a lot easier for the offense to go 20 yards than to drive 80 yards."

After two games, Marcini said he can see maturity developing. "We're not there yet, but we're getting closer. When you mature and you get hit with adversity, you react better."

Head Coach Dick Crum, who's often said that in the early portion of a season the defense is what can keep a team going while the offense develops, said he liked what he saw at Jones Stadium.

"We're starting to play defense like I want us to play it," Crum said. "Our defense played with its back to the wall a lot of the time and just did a great job."

The defensive 11 could become trend-setters.

"They were down on or near our goal line three or four times today and we held them," Taylor said. "We showed (that we bend but didn't break) to the utmost today."

According to at least one Tar Heel, the trend is likely to continue. "We bent some last week, we did this week and we'll probably do it next week," tackle Donnell Thompson said. "But as long as we don't break."

As long as that doesn't happen, Thompson's part of a fashionable trend.

Volleyball team opens

From Staff Reports

The UNC volleyball team opened its season Thursday night with an easy win over Catawba College.

The Tar Heels cleared the bench to beat Catawba in three games, 15-1, 15-5, 15-2. Catawba had trouble returning Carolina's serves and spikes while UNC's offense and defense clicked in the season opener.

The team plays at UNC-Greensboro tonight.
