

Heel offense accumulates big statistics

A wise man once said, and many men less wise have since repeated, that there are three kinds of lies: lies, damn lies and statistics.

That once sage observation, long an abused cliché, applies to Carolina's 33-0 drubbing of Georgia Tech Saturday.

If you look at the numbers, the statistics add up to a seemingly stellar offensive performance, 335 yards rushing, 13-of-23 passes completed for 201 yards and three touchdowns, 95 offensive plays and 28 first downs.

David Poole

But few people in the Carolina locker room after the game were overjoyed with the way the Tar Heels' offense played. And while football folks, especially coaches, like to find things wrong with even the best performances, those who were less than thrilled late Saturday afternoon had a good point.

Unquestionably, Carolina's offense moved the ball well against the Yellow Jackets. But the Tar Heel offensive line, on the average, was 40 pounds heavier than the Tech defenders they moved around all day. With such an advantage, and given that the Tar Heels are laden with talented backs, Carolina should have been able to run the ball against the Yellow Jackets.

The Carolina passing game, just now coming out of mothballs as the coaches arm Rod Elkins with more and more weapons from the Carolina offensive arsenal, was a little less than smooth. But it, too, was effective at times, especially when Elkins dodged the Tech rush and made some big plays.

However, the facts point to three Tar Heel interceptions. Carolina also fumbled four times, but managed to recover all of them. The first of Tech's interceptions stopped Carolina's opening drive. Against a stronger opponent, that could have been a crucial mistake.

For these reasons, it's easy to forgive Dick Crum and some of his players for being less than ecstatic with the offense's performance.

UNC quarterback Rod Elkins ready to connect with Kelvin Bryant

...screen pass was good for 49 yards late in the first half

"Our offense played well at times," Crum said. "We just weren't as consistent as I would like."

"We had some mistakes I wasn't too crazy about—receivers running wrong routes and things like that."

The success Carolina did have came as a result of Carolina's ability to establish the things it wanted to do.

"We have to establish our running game first," Rod Elkins said. "I don't think teams prepare too well for our passing game. They prepare for our running game. They have to because we have such great backs."

"When we go out there teams look for me to run and run with the ball," Amos Lawrence said. "We throw a pass and that loosens it up. That makes it easier to run or pass."

As Lawrence noted, success on offense can feed off itself. A team that is successful on the ground forces the opposing defense to concentrate on stopping the run. A defense keyed on the rushing game is easier to pass against. The more the offense can pass, the more the defense has to respect the pass and the easier it becomes to run. When everything works, the defense finds itself caught in a vicious circle.

"We try to keep the defense off stride," tight end Mike Chatham said. "When you make the defense think too much, they can't just lay their ears back and come after you."

As far as statistics go, Crum had the definitive word. "The important thing is to win the game," he said. "Total yardage is good for statistics, but statistics don't win football games."

At least one Carolina statistic doesn't lie. That's the one that reads: Wins-4, Losses-0.

Weekend roundup

Phillips leads Heel women's soccer win

From Staff Reports

Liz Phillips scored three first-half goals to lead the North Carolina women's soccer team to a 5-0 victory over the Duke soccer club Sunday at Fetzer Field.

The normally potent Tar Heel offense was limited to 16 shots on goal, but Carolina didn't need much of an offense as the defense stopped the Blue Devils from taking a shot on goal. The win was UNC's fourth straight shutout.

Phillips' first score came six minutes into the game off a corner kick and was followed with another 30 seconds later off a Nancy Clary assist. Phillips scored her third goal and gave UNC a 3-0 halftime lead with 11 minutes left on an assist by Chrissy Billings.

The Tar Heel offense slowed down in the second half, but exploded for two goals in 20 seconds at the midway point. Ann Klas scored unassisted to make it 4-0 and Tracy Wren came back with a goal to the upper right-hand corner to finish the scoring.

The game marked the return of two starters to action. Defender Ellen Goldberg and striker Janet Rayfield saw limited action.

UNC coach Anson Dorrance said Phillips showed a versatility that aided the offense. "She scored both from forward and from midfield," Dorrance said. "She played extremely well. As a forward she's excellent, but as a midfielder she's outstanding."

The North Carolina men's soccer team boosted its record to 9-2 Saturday with a 2-1 victory over Lynchburg College.

Senior co-captain Chris Heyn scored both goals. The first came on a throw-in from Ricky Marvin at 27:40 of the first half, the second at 22:53 of the second half on an assist from Steve Turner.

Tar Heel goalie Kevin Kane recorded nine saves. Carolina's next action comes Tuesday when the Heels travel to Guilford.

The Carolina women's tennis team took weekend victories over Maryland and Virginia. The Tar Heels scored an 8-1 win over the Terps Friday and a 9-0 win over the Cavaliers Saturday.

No. 1 player Margie Brown paced the way with straight-set victories in both matches. The Tar Heels are 2-0 in the Atlantic Coast Conference and meet N.C. State at the Varsity Courts at 2 p.m. Tuesday.

The UNC volleyball team placed second in the South Carolina Invitational tournament held this weekend in Columbia, S.C.

Ten teams began competition Friday in two five-team pools. The Tar Heels defeated East Carolina, South Carolina and the College of Charleston, but lost to Tennessee to finish second in their pool and advance to the second day of competition.

On Saturday, Carolina played five matches—beating N.C. State twice, splitting two matches with Kentucky and losing to eventual tournament champion Tennessee.

"We really hung in there and almost beat Tennessee even though we were exhausted after all those matches," senior Adri Enard said. "We played better than we have all season."

The men's cross country team swept the first nine places to easily defeat Campbell College in their meet Saturday at Buies Creek.

The Tar Heels rested their top five runners in preparation for this week's Furman Invitational. Freshman Jack Morgan took first place, followed by freshman Mike Kominsky. Senior Bobby Hill was third.

Carolina squandered several goal opportunities Saturday as Virginia defeated Carolina 2-0 in field hockey.

The Tar Heels outshot the Cavaliers 12-10, but couldn't produce against an unyielding defense led by goalie Mimi Beggs.

"We were down there a lot but didn't have the luck with us," UNC coach Dolly Hunter said. "They had four saves one time after the goalie had already gone down."

Abby Brackett put the Wahos' first goal in with an assist from Mary Henry. Late in the second half, Henry scored her goal on an assist from Jackie Campbell.

The UNC women's cross country team took the top seven spots Saturday to win the Wake Forest Invitational. The Tar Heels won with 15 points, followed by the Deacons with 50. St. Augustine and Duke trailed the field.

Carolina's Marla Daniel won the 5,000-meter race in a time of 18:19. Nancy Radford was second, followed by Joan Nesbitt, Lindy Appen, Janice High, Meg Heffern and Carolyn Fellows.

Tar Heels

"When (Bryant) gets in there and gets going, there's no reason to take him out," Crum said. "They complement each other very well; they work well together."

The Tar Heel defense has proved it, too, knows the meaning of cooperation. Crum's philosophy calls for a team defense, one in which the whole is more important than any of the parts. So far, he and defensive coordinator Denny Marcin say they can't argue with the performances they've seen, but they're looking for more.

"We played good at times last year," Marcin said, "but at other times we'd get sloppy. This year we're trying to be perfect."

Taylor, who belted Tech players more than once Saturday, said, "We knew we had a good defense before the season, but as far as not giving up a touchdown, I personally couldn't conceive of it. This team has six or seven guys who can make the big play."

Taylor says he knows a touchdown will be scored sometime, but until it happens he's enjoying the stinginess of his corps. "The main thing is not to give up the touchdown. Not too many college teams in the nation can say that. That gives us something to root for."

Knowing Kelley would attempt to pass a rush, the Tar Heel defense made plans to rush more than it had in other games, and its strategy called for early intimidation of Kelley.

"The players were confident we could win," Taylor said. "The pressure was to keep them from scoring. We had to get to (Kelley) early to discourage him. He probably lost a little of his confidence."

Give blood

Kelley finished the game 7-of-18 for 52 yards, and to his credit, his receivers often were tightly covered, and his offensive line broke down several times. "Mike didn't get much help today," Curry said. "We haven't had this much trouble passing ever. Our passing protection was just never there. We never slowed up their rush."
