

Sturdivant running against Wake Forest...senior gained 43 yards in nine carries

UNC's Walter Sturdivant: a study in working hard

WINSTON-SALEM—To his right, Amos Lawrence was receiving congratulations for 65 yards rushing and one touchdown. To his left, Billy Johnson was getting a pat on the back for 41 yards and a collection of bulldozing blocks.

The man in the middle, so to speak, was North Carolina reserve fullback Walter Sturdivant. He was busy unwrapping athletic tape and a bandage from his left thigh.

In the crowd of the undersized locker room, Sturdivant was as unobtrusive as a 5-foot-10, 210-pound guy could be. In nine carries, he had picked up 43 yards in the 27-9 victory over Wake Forest, his best rushing day as a Tar Heel.

A couple of reporters asked questions of Sturdivant, and he answered them articulately and honestly. And, unlike his more well-known friends and teammates in the North Carolina backfield—Lawrence, Johnson and Kelvin Bryant—he gets little practice.

He's asked more questions as an RTVP major than he's had to answer as a college football player—by far—and that's different from his career at Richmond Senior High in Rockingham.

Sturdivant was a high school star, a three-sport letterman who played football and basketball and ran track. At Carolina, he never has been a star and he won't be. The beauty here is his acceptance of a given situation. If coaches could Xerox his attitude and pass out copies to incoming freshmen, they probably would.

Bill Fields

"I just want to contribute," Sturdivant says. "When I get the call, I give it my best. I play hard and do my best. I try to work real hard, because if something happens to Billy—if he gets hurt or is tired—I step in."

Sturdivant says he's always been a person that didn't give up in any situation, and credits his perseverance to his father, who died when Walter was 11.

"I never quit," Sturdivant says. "That's the way my father was, and I always wanted to be like him. He worked hard but never had a whole lot of money. It was a difficult life. In a way, he worked himself to death."

It would have made his father happy, Sturdivant says, to have seen him complete high school and continue with college. In fact, he says his mother was never too keen about his football career, but she realized his proficiency on the field could help him earn a college degree.

"The big thing in Richmond County is recreational football, but I never got to play until the seventh grade. When my mother saw I had to get an education she was behind me all the way. My mother didn't have a whole lot of education and it was her wish that none of us ever quit school."

Sturdivant's older brother, Leon, graduated with a political science degree from Carolina four years ago. He has two sisters, ages 17 and 31. "If my Dad is my hero," Walter says, "then Leon is No. 2. If I'm in a game, he'll try his best to be there." Walter says that's not true for his mother, who may be his biggest rooter but doesn't attend Carolina games. "She can't stand to see a bunch of big guys jump on me."

Sturdivant has been a defensive back, a tailback, a kick returner and now a fullback for the Tar Heels. His career has not been the type that earns one's portrait in the corridor of Carmichael Auditorium. He plans a broadcasting career and admits his chances of being selected in the National Football League draft are not good. He says he has accepted that, too.

"I haven't played that much at Carolina, but I've gotten a lot out of my time here," he says. "When I got here, things were pretty difficult. But there are two things you can do. You can think about the way things used to be, or you can work to change how they are."

Perhaps Walter Sturdivant should have considered a teaching career. He sets a pretty fair example.

confer to ensure that both players were in motion.

"I thought we had scored," Crum said. Center Rick Donnalley was even more sure. "I was on the bench getting a drink of water. It was a big blow to our morale."

The Heels, however, didn't suffer long. On their next two possessions, they put together what may have been the two most impressive offensive drives of the season.

Carolina took the ball 78 yards on 12 plays, culminating in a 6-yard pass from Elkins to Lawrence. Hayes missed the PAT, ending his conference-record streak at 54. Carolina led 20-3.

Wake, on its next possession, ran three plays, then punted. Greg Poole made a fair catch with the ball on the UNC 6 with 13:09 left in the game. Less than nine minutes later Lawrence, who led the UNC rushing attack with 65 yards, scored on a two-yard run capping a 94-yard, 19-play drive that erased any doubt that might have been left.

The only issue that remained was whether the Deacons would score the first touchdown of the year against the Tar Heel defense. They did. Venuto, operating against Carolina's second-string defense, hit Duckett with a 17-yard scoring strike with 21 seconds remaining.

"We weren't happy about them getting the score," Crum said. "I guess we could have put our older kids back in there, but we had the game pretty much in control by then."

The score by the Deacons gave them somewhat of a moral victory. But moral victories don't count in the standings.

And they don't go into history books, either.

Heels upset 16th-ranked ODU in soccer tourney

From staff and wire reports

Steve Turner scored two goals to lead the North Carolina men's soccer team to a 4-0 upset victory over 16th-ranked Old Dominion and first-place in the Harbor Front Classic Saturday in Norfolk, Va.

In addition to Turner's two goals, Mike Fiocco scored and ODU put a ball in its own goal in the Tar Heels first win this season over a nationally ranked team.

"We pummeled them," UNC coach Anson Dorrance said. "John Boettighmeier played the best game I've ever seen him play. Everyone was unselfish and worked really hard."

The shutout was the team's eighth of the season and three defenders made the all-tournament team. Sweeper Ricky Marvin was named the tournament's MVP and stoppers Jim Poff and Bucky Buckley were voted to the team. Striker Sean Naber also won all-tournament honors.

"The defense was unbelievable," Dorrance said. "Our marking was the best the ODU coach has ever seen."

The Tar Heels defeated St. Johns 2-1 in the first round on Friday. Carolina opens its Atlantic Coast Conference schedule against Virginia at 3:30 p.m. Wednesday at Petzer Field.

Weekend roundup

Janet Rayfield scored a first-half goal off a free kick to give the North Carolina women's soccer team a 1-0 victory over James Madison for the Old Dominion Invitational title Saturday in Norfolk, Va.

Earlier Saturday, Kerry Judd scored three goals and Sarah Marr scored twice as Carolina defeated Old Dominion 9-1 in the beginning of the round-robin tournament.

James Madison took control early in the game, but the UNC defense turned back three corner kicks and then shut down the Madison attack the rest of the way.

"They were shoving the ball down our throats early and we had to adjust," goalie Molly Current said. "After that, the game was completely different."

"We were tentative for the first five minutes and after that we were exceptional," UNC coach Anson Dorrance said. "Liz Crowley shut down one of their best players. Nancy Clary was excellent. She's proving that she's one of the best women's players around."

The Carolina field hockey team dropped its record to 2-5 Friday with a 4-0 loss to 12th-ranked William & Mary. The Tar Heels resume play Tuesday when they travel to High Point.

The North Carolina volleyball team finished fourth in a 15-team field Saturday at the Florida State Invitational in Tallahassee, Fla. UNC, 20-7 for the season, took victories over Florida Southern, Lake City Community College, Memphis State and Central Florida. The Tar Heels were defeated by Miami, Fla., and Tennessee.

The Tar Heel men's cross country team finished sixth in the Furman Invitational at Greenville, S.C., Saturday. Jimmy Cooper paced Carolina with a third-place time of 30:47. East Tennessee State won the team title.

The Carolina women's cross country team took a 17-42 victory over Richmond Friday at Finley Golf Course to go to 1-1 for the season. Tar Heel runners took the first four places, with Marla Daniel winning in 17:25.1.

Jack Nicklaus Jr. took individual honors in a 36-hole golf tournament at Campbell College in Buies Creek Friday; Nicklaus shot 72-73-145. Wake Forest won the team title, with the Tar Heels finishing second, seven strokes back.
