The schedule of events is:

A series of workshops, social activities and the showing of a film will be held beginning today through Oct. 31 as a part of UNC's Gay Awareness Week.

The week's activities are sponsored by the Carolina Gay Association and the Carolina Union Human Relations Committee.

"Our main goal with Gay Awareness Week is to educate the straight community on gay issues and concerns," said Human Relations Committee Chairman Larry Ellis.

Included in the week will be workshops on coming out, civil rights, gay rights and feminism, religious issues and homosexuality and the athlete.

A few highlights of the week will be a talk Monday on gay rights and the new conservatism, and the film "Word is Out," which will be shown Tuesday.

The CGA and the Human Relations Committee will combine to offer outreach workshops to dormitories and other organizations that request it on "Understanding Gayness."

CGA president Randy Woodland said the function of the week and the organization was to alleviate the myths and misconceptions about gays with an emphasis on education.
