

Soccer team shuts out William & Mary

By GEOFFRY MOCK
Staff Writer

The North Carolina men's soccer team used one of its most reliable plays to defeat William & Mary 2-0 Wednesday at Chapel Hill High School in a game delayed because the bus carrying the Indians to Chapel Hill broke down.

After failing to score in the first half, the Tar Heels penetrated deep into William & Mary's territory and scored on a Sean Naber header off a Ricky Marvin throw-in.

UNC coach Anson Dorrance said the throw-in is a potent weapon in the Tar Heel attack. "With a Ricky Marvin throw-in deep in enemy territory, we are threatening every time we have the ball down there," Dorrance said.

The Carolina defense protected the 1-0 lead throughout the second half and Nicky Donnelly scored a clinching goal with two minutes remaining in the game of a booming clear by Marvin from Carolina territory.

The victory improves the Tar Heels' record to 16-3-1 and keeps them in the running for a possible at-large bid to the NCAA tournament.

Carolina goalie Kevin Kane was credited with nine saves in recording the team's 12th shutout of the season. The defense has been Carolina's strong point all season, but after giving up four goals to N.C. State last Saturday, Dorrance said the defense needed work.

"We were upset with our marking against State," he said, "so we gave that special emphasis this week. I was very pleased with Mike Fiocco who marked their best striker and did a great job."

After an even first half, the Tar Heels came out strong for the second half, and Dorrance said Carolina had the advantage in substitutions. "William & Mary had our talent, but not our depth," he said.

Carolina's next game is at home against Wake Forest at 3 p.m. Saturday at Fetzer Field.

Brotherly love?

Richardsons to meet in football game

By MARK TAYLOE
Staff Writer

Clemson's Death Valley may have to borrow something from Philadelphia for a few hours Saturday. No, not Ron Jaworski or Harold Carmichael. Just the city's nickname, "brotherly love."

Carolina's starting wide receiver Jon Richardson and his brother, Mark, who is a second-team defensive end for the Tigers, have always been close. In fact, both brothers say they're more like good friends than siblings.

"We always did a lot together when we were younger," Jon said. "I've always pulled for him in everything he's done. He's a great brother."

"We're just good friends and always have been," Mark said. "We're only one year apart, so we were always able to do a lot together."

Mark, a sophomore, has played sparingly this season, but if he does play, there's a good chance he will go head-to-head with his older brother. Clemson often sends the defensive end to cover passing situations.

"I don't know how I will react," Mark said. "I've thought about it a lot. It would be interesting."

Jon said he would try not to think about the match-up. "We've never played against each other before, so it will be weird. But in the game I don't think it would cross my mind."

During their high school days at Spartanburg, S.C., Jon and Mark both played tight end with Jon playing the starting role. Both said there was no friction between them.

"We got along fine," Jon said. "He was patient and just waited his turn." "He was starting and I was second team," Mark said. "That's all there was to it."

Mark and Jon are not the only football players in their family. Their father is Jerry Richardson, a former NFL standout with the Baltimore Colts. Many ask the two what impact he has had on their football careers.

"You might think there was a lot of pressure," Jon said. "But I never had any pressure on me. In fact, he likes basketball better than football. It's great being his son. I'm real proud to be his son. Not many can claim it like I do."

Jon has never been involved in a victory over Clemson because the Tigers have won the last three games. How would he react to a loss Saturday, especially with a brother on the opposing team?

"I'll shake hands with him but we probably won't go out after the game. I just hate to lose and hate to think about losing."

Neither Jon nor Mark would predict a winner in Saturday's game.

Volleyball team plays ECU for top seed

The UNC volleyball team, coming off a big win at the Atlantic Coast Conference tournament, plays its final home match against East Carolina Thursday at 7 p.m.

"This is a very important match because if we win, we clinch the first place seed at the N.C. A.I.A.W. state tournament," coach Beth Miller said.

Carolina defeated ECU earlier this season in Greenville, but the Pirates gave Carolina some trouble, taking the match to four games.

"We didn't have an easy match over there and I don't anticipate one here. ECU in any sport is always keyed up for UNC," Miller said.

The match will also be significant for senior co-captains Cindy Adcock and Adri Ennard because it will be their last appearance in Carmichael.

"None of the North Carolina teams are very good except N.C. State, but we have to be careful because they can come up behind you when you least expect it. ECU is a real scrappy team and they have nothing to lose," Ennard said.

Guides program offers instruction, ski trip

The grass is still green, the trees are not yet bare and winter is the farthest thing from the minds of some, but for Chapel Hill ski bums, it's never too early to start planning that Christmas vacation ski trip.

The Ski Club is going to Smuggler's Notch, Vt., and fliers around campus advertise trips to Colorado and Idaho. But according to Associate IM-Rec Director Marty Pomerantz, one of the best deals exists right here in North Carolina.

Pomerantz is the UNC coordinator for the French-Swiss Guides program that offers an annual trip to Beech and Sugar mountains in Banner Elk, N.C. This year the trip includes four sessions of skiing Jan. 4-8, 1981.

party for about 75 people in their adjoining rooms, and it was wild."

For those who could overcome the next morning's hangover, the skiing wasn't so bad either.

"We got tons of skiing in, including night-skiing, which is a one-of-a-kind experience. They were very organized and had everything arranged and moved us pretty fast. The slopes were fairly crowded, but that really didn't detract from the skiing," said junior Mark McLaughlin.

Right now, Pomerantz is for putting a similar program on the Physical Education department curriculum so that students can take it as a class and receive one hour's credit.

UNC students would attend instructional classes and dry-land sessions culminating in a trip to the Appalachian Mountains at the end of the semester. During the trip, students would receive lessons from instructors from the French-Swiss Ski College in Boone, N.C.

"All the other schools offer the program for credit, but it's still on the drawing board here. P.E. department Chairman John Billing sounded very optimistic the last time I talked to him," Pomerantz said.

"The trip to Beech and Sugar is for more experienced skiers, whereas the credit program and trip to Appalachian would be geared toward beginners who then might go skiing the following year at Sugar and Beech," he said.

Bynum says he has the perfect plan for this Christmas. "Hey, if we make it to the Peach Bowl, it would make a great vacation package to go down to Atlanta for the game and then go skiing for four days in Banner Elk."

The $115 cost includes lodging, all equipment and all slope and lift fees. The charge is $95 for those bringing their own equipment.

"The package includes everything but food and transportation. You just can't beat that price," Pomerantz said.

Last year, the itinerary provided for one night and one day of skiing at Sugar Mountain and two days of skiing at Beech, as well as nightly parties at the hotel and local night spots.

One of the advantages of the trip is the fact that about 20 other college groups are also staying at the hotel.

"There was a lot of interaction among all the different schools, so it was a good way to meet some interesting people," said Tony Zimmerman, a UNC junior. "You'd meet someone on the slopes and then see them again that evening at the hotel. The young, college-oriented environment was great for parties."

"It was ideal for mixing with other college students," junior R.L. Bynum said. "We had a lot of fun. One night 12 girls from South Carolina threw a
