

Worthy, Perkins shine but Smith not pleased with overall game

By CLIFTON BARNES and NORMAN CANNADA
Staff Writers

James Worthy is back. Matt Doherty and Sam Perkins are here. The play of these players salvaged a Blue-White basketball performance Friday for coach Dean Smith, in his 20th year coaching the Tar Heels. "I wasn't real entertained," Smith said of the 67-53 Blue victory. "But seeing Worthy back was certainly entertaining."

Smith said he didn't have great expectations for the game because of a few setbacks in practice. Worthy has missed eight days of practice because of a sore Achilles tendon in the same leg in which he broke an ankle bone last season. In addition, centers Pete Budko, Timo Makkonen and Sam Perkins have missed practice days because of illnesses or injuries.

"I'm feeling pretty good," Worthy said after a 13-point effort in a little less than 20 minutes of action. "It stiffens up at times, and I always feel the pain, but that's part of being an athlete."

Worthy said he was back mentally, but physically he'd like to be better because he felt pain when he stopped quickly or made cuts. "Mentally, the injury doesn't bother me," he said.

He looked like he was back physically as well near the end of the first half when he put some excitement into an otherwise boring game by dunking the ball after an assist from Jimmy Black.

"At moments we looked good," Smith said. "We had some pretty plays but no consistency." Smith said the returning players were more nervous than the freshman. "Doherty and Perkins were more relaxed than some freshmen in the past," Smith said. "The older guys were trying to say 'Hey, I'm better than I was last year.'"

Although no lineup has been decided yet, Smith said

Doherty and Perkins had a chance to be in the starting five when the season begins.

Perkins, a 6-9, 215-pound Latham, N.Y. native, scored 21 points in a losing effort for the Whites. He was the leading scorer for the losers but in a regular season game he won't be allowed the seven fouls he committed Friday. The foul-out rule was waived for the game.

It was obvious that Perkins was here from the beginning when he blocked the first shot of the game. Later in the second half, Perkins showed he has offensive ability, making a shot while has-was off balance.

Doherty, who is already being compared with former UNC All-American Mike O'Koren, was also impressive, helping the Blue team with a 14-point performance. Six of those points came in the final moments to help his team pull away.

The biggest play for Doherty was a reverse layup after a steal with 4:35 remaining to put the Blue team up by four.

"The freshmen are super-talented," senior Al Wood said. "They don't really play like freshmen. They can help us right now." Wood said because of the prospect of a lot of young players contributing, this year's team looked like the 1977 team that lost to Marquette in the NCAA finals.

Wood and Smith agreed the team's execution could have been better. "We've only had 10 people in practice," Wood said. "When Pete (Budko) and James (Worthy) are healthy we will be able to compete with anybody."

Budko, who has been sidelined with a stress fracture of the leg, begins practice today and should be able to play in the second Blue-White game Saturday afternoon, Smith said.

Sam Perkins, Chris Brust (45) and Eric Kenny ...battle for rebound in Blue-White game

"We are behind schedule in getting ready for the season," Smith said. "There's so much to do. We just have to get the basics of good execution."

Student tickets for the Blue-White game and the exhibition with Windsor on Nov. 19 are still available at the Carmichael Auditorium ticket office. Students may pick up one ticket and buy an unlimited number of tickets.

around right end and fumbled but recovered, setting up first and goal from the one.

Two Clemson runs into the middle of the Tar Heel defense were for nothing, then came Taylor's tackle. "I think our defensive players were the only people in the stadium who didn't think they were going to score," UNC tight end Mike Chatham said. "The fans, the writers, everybody. It was a credit to the whole defense. It was all heart."

The Tar Heels, who used a conservative game plan of running plays—quarterback Rod Elkins passed just eight times—were led by tailbacks Kelvin Bryant, who gained 138 yards, and Amos Lawrence, who rushed for 112.

Lawrence scored on two three-yard runs, Bryant plunged over from the one, and Jeff Hayes kicked a 42-yard field goal for North Carolina's scoring.

"I wish we could have gotten in at the end because it's tough on the players to get that close and be turned back," Clemson coach Danny Ford said. "But North Carolina is a great ball club. There's no doubt they have the best personnel in the ACC."

North Carolina's victory was its first over Clemson since 1976; and wins in the Tigers' "Death Valley," as Memorial Stadium is aptly called, have been doubly scarce.

With the win, Carolina increased its chances for the ACC championship and a second straight bowl appearance. With games remaining in Kenan Stadium against Virginia this week and Duke in the season finale on Nov. 22, the Tar Heels lead second-place Maryland by one game.

Scouts from the Gator, Liberty, Peach, Hall of Fame and Tangerine bowls were at the game. The Gator Bowl scout was particularly visible around North Carolina athletic officials.

UNC Head Coach Dick Crum said, "Coming off last week and coming in here...well, winning was very important for us."

When the game was over, Lawrence Taylor, the Tar Heels' clutch defensive player all season, was asked how he'd like to be remembered. "One of my goals before the year started," he said, "was that in the future, when people mention the Carolina defense, that they'll mention my name the way people talked about (Dee) Hardison, (Rod) Broadway and (Alan) Caldwell of the 1977 defense. I'd like that to happen."

Homer Jordan could tell him he doesn't have a thing to worry about.

Tar Heel booters beat Wake, look to Duke

From staff reports

Coasting through a lackadaisical first half against Wake Forest, the North Carolina men's soccer team confirmed coach Anson Dorrance's worst fears about the team looking beyond the Deacons to an Atlantic Coast Conference showdown with Duke.

"We went into the locker room at the half," Dorrance said, "and the staff stayed five minutes. We told them we were leaving and if they wanted to lose, go ahead. The team came out fired up."

weekend roundup

With the team newly motivated, the Tar Heels dominated the second half and defeated Wake Forest 3-1 Saturday on Fetzer Field, setting up Saturday's game with Duke.

The Deacons came into the game with only one ACC victory, but Wake played Carolina close throughout the first half, the only score coming with 3:42 remaining on a Tony Johnson header, assisted by Tim Ennsley.

The Tar Heels forced most of the action early in the second half and increased their lead to 2-0 with 23 minutes remaining on an unassisted score from

Ennsley's goal seemed to secure the victory, but a junk score by Steve Heileman suddenly made it a one-goal margin, and the game was in doubt until John Boettigheimer scored with 32 seconds left.

The win was Carolina's 17th of the season, with three losses and a tie, and set a new school record for wins in a season. "There should have been at least five goals," Dorrance said. "I was pleased with the second half, but the first half was poor. There was a lack of motivation."

Two other weekend contests will affect UNC's status for an at-large bid to the NCAA tournament. UNC-Wilmington, a loser to Carolina but ranked higher than the Tar Heels, upset 20th ranked Duke. Appalachian State also defeated N.C. State 2-1. Dorrance said ASU had to beat State for Carolina to have a shot at the bid.

Ann Klas scored a goal and had two assists to lead the North Carolina women's soccer team to a 4-0 victory over the Raleigh Strikers at Fetzer Field in the Tar Heels' final home game Saturday.

Carolina started strong and three of the goals came in the first half. Klas and Janet Rayfield assisted Chrissy Billings' score midway through the half to open the scoring and Synthia Scott followed 10 minutes later with an unassisted goal. Klas completed the first-half scoring with a goal assisted by Scott.

Coach Anson Dorrance substituted freely in the second half, and the only score came with 12:29 remaining on another Billings' goal, assisted again by Klas.

The game marked the last appearance at Fetzer for seniors Rosemary Carbery and Sarah Marr.

"It's been an unbelievable experience," Carbery said. "Playing with these people has been lots of fun."

The Tar Heels now go to Colorado to finish their season in the AIAW National Invitational Tournament, which starts Friday.

The UNC volleyball team had a relatively easy time in its last home match of the season, defeating East Carolina 15-8, 15-6, 15-9 Thursday night in Carmichael Auditorium.

Earlier in the season, UNC beat ECU in a four-game match in Greenville. "ECU didn't play as well as they did in Greenville," sophomore Jacky Jones said. "We had a good crowd and we played better on defense. We've been working on that in practice and it's really showing up in our games."

The Tar Heels play their final regular-season match at Guilford College Tuesday night.

"We played Guilford last year and they weren't too strong, but we haven't seen them this year. I think right now we are using matches as preparation for the state and regional tournaments coming up," sophomore Laura Heild said.

Carolina's field hockey team took fourth place in the AIAW Region II Tournament Saturday in High Point to finish its season with an 8-6 record.

In UNC's first-round match, the Tar Heels avenged an early season defeat by nipping James Madison 3-1 in overtime. Carolina goals were scored by Mary Stewart, Kim Knickerbocker and Lisa Todd.

Old Dominion eliminated the Tar Heels in the semifinals with a come-from-behind 3-2 win. Ann Donio put Carolina ahead with two first-half goals, but ODU's three second-half tallies gave it the win.

In a consolation match, Virginia shut out Carolina for the second time this season, this time by a 5-0 score.
