

Amid speculation, North Carolina likely to play in Peach Bowl

By BILL FIELDS

Amid speculation leading up to Saturday, when football bowl bids officially can be extended, it appears likely that North Carolina will play in the Peach Bowl in Atlanta on Jan. 2. "North Carolina has been our top team for the last 10 days now," Peach Bowl Executive Director George Crumley said Tuesday. "Assurances that we've had through third parties indicate if North Carolina doesn't get a bid to the Gator Bowl, they'll go to the Peach Bowl." UNC Director of Athletics John Swofford Tuesday would not discuss the Tar Heels' chances of receiving a bid to any particular bowl. "We have an idea of what our possibilities are," Swofford said. "Whether those possibilities will exist on Saturday, I don't know."

Separate newspaper reports Monday indicated North Carolina would play in the Peach Bowl or in the Liberty Bowl, which will be held Dec. 27 in Memphis, Tenn. Bud Dudley, executive director of the Liberty Bowl Classic, said Tuesday that while his bowl was interested in the Tar Heels, "we heard they had decided to go to another bowl." Dudley said the report had not been verified, and that the Liberty Bowl was still interested in UNC and would have a representative at Saturday's North Carolina-Virginia game in Kenan Stadium. "We think very highly of North Carolina," Dudley said. "It seems we get 100 rumors an hour in here. We just have to sift them out and see where we stand. "It's a matter of waiting for the scores to come in on Saturday," he said, adding the Liberty Bowl was still considering teams from the Big Ten, Big Eight and independents Pittsburgh and Penn State. The Gator Bowl, where the Tar Heels defeated Michigan in post-season action last year, reportedly will invite South Carolina. The State newspaper in Columbia, S.C., reported Tuesday that the Gamecocks would get one spot primarily because of expectations that star runner George Rogers will win the Heisman Trophy, which is awarded to the nation's top collegiate player. The Miami News, which also reported the Gamecocks had a sure bid to the Gator Bowl, said USC's opponent may be the winner of this month's Penn State-Pittsburgh game. Although Swofford said UNC would have nothing against returning to the Gator Bowl this year, the Tar Heels may not be offered a bid. ABC-TV, which will televise the Dec. 29 game, reportedly does not want another Southern team, unless it is Alabama or Florida State.

The Tar Heels have participated recently in both the Peach and Liberty bowls. Arizona State defeated UNC 48-26 in the Peach Bowl in 1970, and Kentucky shut out Carolina 21-0 there in 1976. In the 1977 Liberty Bowl Nebraska rallied to defeat the Tar Heels 21-17. "It would be a privilege to have North Carolina in the Peach Bowl against a team like Texas, Missouri, a Big Ten team or maybe even Penn State depending on this Saturday," Crumley said. "We've always had good response from the North Carolina fans. And I think if the fans up there want to come to Atlanta, North Carolina can make that decision on Saturday." Last year's Gator Bowl was the fifth largest-paying postseason game. Swofford said if the Tar Heels found themselves in the Peach Bowl, it would not be a letdown, even though they have a better record this year than last. "I don't think it would be a letdown," Swofford said. "I think your opponents have a lot to determine how excited your players are. Our players were very excited about playing Michigan last year. "We would like to play) most anyone ranked ahead of us. Anybody who has a real good football reputation is good for our players. That situation helps our football program." Swofford said the mystery and speculation were part of the game. "It's like fitting a puzzle together. It's a matter of fitting teams into slots. That's part of the fun...figuring out who is going where."

Crum cites UNC intensity lapse

By DAVID POOLE

When Amos Lawrence scored a third-quarter touchdown against the Clemson Tigers to put North Carolina ahead 24-6 Saturday, things looked good for the Tar Heels. But somebody forgot to tell Clemson that the game was out of reach and the Tigers roared back. They had seven chances to score the winning touchdown from inside the Carolina six-yard line, but the defense held and the Heels won 24-19.

"We probably let up a little bit on our intensity," coach Dick Crum said at his weekly press conference Tuesday. "We became a little conservative on offense when we went up 24-6, and we probably should not have done so."

"Our offense became conservative because we just wanted to hold on to the ball," tight end Mike Chatham said. "Once Clemson got the momentum, it was hard for us to get back into the flow."

The Tar Heel lapse in concentration nearly threw the race for the Atlantic Coast Conference title into chaos. A Carolina loss would have put the Tar Heels at 3-1 in the league, tied with Maryland and one game ahead of Clemson and Virginia. The UNC win means that Carolina can clinch at least a tie for the title with a win over the Cavaliers.

"The loss at Oklahoma (two weeks ago) was tough," Chatham said. "We had to bounce back against Clemson and put everything back into perspective. Winning the ACC is our main goal now."

"I thought our kids had a very good recovery from the Oklahoma situation," Crum said. "If we didn't have a quality group of players, the way things went for us in the fourth quarter, we could have just folded up and quit. It is extremely tough to win at Clemson."

Crum also talked about the freshh bunch on a fourth-quarter Clemson punt that cost Carolina possession of the ball. The punt bounced backward and hit Rocky White, a blocker on Carolina's punting front wall who had retreated downfield to protect the deep man, Greg Poole. The Tigers' Jeff Suttle recovered.

"There's about as much a chance of that kind of bounce happening as there is of you walking down the street and having a safe fall on your head," Crum said. "I don't know that there's anything you can do to keep that sort of thing from happening because it's so rare."

Crum had little to say about the topic of most of the conversation among the reporters gathered for the news conference—the bowl picture. "I, instead chose to talk about the UNC game Saturday with the Virginia Cavaliers.

"Virginia is a good football team," he said. "They play solid football and have good personnel. Todd Kirtley is a very efficient quarterback and (Tom) Vigorito is a great running back."

The Cavaliers pulled a major upset in defeating Tennessee at Knoxville two weeks ago, then lost a heartbreaker to Rutgers last Saturday. Crum did not see that fact as evidence of Virginia weaknesses and warned that Rutgers football should not be underestimated.

"Virginia was not upset by Rutgers," he said. "Virginia got beat by a very good team."

"We'll have our work cut out for us this weekend," Crum added. "Virginia and Carolina have a great rivalry, especially for the older graduates. It will be a very tough football game."

Bulldogs take top spot; Carolina 15th

By The Associated Press

The Georgia Bulldogs, the nation's only unbeaten-untied major team, have moved into first place in The Associated Press college football poll for the first time since late in the 1942 season.

Following Saturday's 26-21 come-from-behind triumph over Florida, Georgia received 54 1/2 of 66 first-place votes and 1,299 1/2 of a possible 1,320 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters.

The Bulldogs were No. 2 behind Notre Dame a week ago, but the Fighting Irish were held to a 3-3 tie by Georgia Tech and slipped from first place to sixth.

Southern California, fourth last week, moved into second place with six first-place votes and 1,180 points following a 34-9 victory over Stanford. Florida State, a 31-7 winner over Virginia Tech, held onto third place with 1,172 points. The Seminoles received three first-place ballots.

Nebraska is fourth with two first-place votes and 1,105 points after a 55-8 rout of Kansas State. Alabama, the No. 1 team two weeks ago, rose from sixth to fifth with 1,067 points by defeating Louisiana State 28-7.

Notre Dame was sixth with 1,045 points, followed by Ohio State.
