

Those amazing Top 10 Heels

Those Really Incredibly Amazing Tar Heels might make a hit television show for NBC's Freddie Silverman. North Carolina's football Tar Heels finished in the Top 10 of the national rankings while the basketball Heels were still in the Top Ten of the late December basketball polls.

Michigan and Notre Dame can brag about the same thing, but for UNC — an Atlantic Coast Conference product — that's darn near incredible.

But for the 1980 football season, the Georgia Bulldogs own the ultimate bragging rights. The basketball team looks good enough, but the mythical national football championship is enough bragging rights to last a while.

Vince Dooley's unbeaten squad may not have been the best team in the country, but after its win over Notre Dame in the Sugar Bowl, the 'Dogs were the obvious and fair choice. By the season's end Pittsburgh and Oklahoma, second and third in the final polls, might have been better teams.

AP sportswriters felt they were 10th. Notre Dame, who managed only a 3-3 tie with Georgia Tech, finished the season 9-2-1. But the Irish had to finish near the top because they always finish near the top.

In football Notre Dame is Notre Dame; in basketball North Carolina is North Carolina ... or probably more correctly Dean Smith is Dean Smith.

The basketball Tar Heels began the year with injury problems and without the graduated Mike O'Koren, Dave Colescott, Rich Yonaker, John Virgil and Jeff Wolf. Still, the Tar Heels were in the preseason Top 20 polls and worked their way up to No. 6, even after a loss to Wake Forest.

This week the Tar Heels are No. 17 with four losses. No other team ahead of them has even three losses. The schedule certainly has something to do with the ranking. Last month the Tar Heels beat nationally ranked Georgetown and Arkansas to take the Alaskan Shoot-out tournament in Anchorage.

Carolina's Lawrence Taylor ... leader of Top 10 Tar Heels

Dominion. Old Dominion wasn't so simple, as the Monarchs beat the Blue Demons 63-62 Saturday.

Oregon State, the top shooting team in the nation, is No. 1 and deservedly so with a 13-0 record. The Beavers probably will not stay unbeaten long and ACC followers know the odds of No. 2 Virginia and No. 5 Wake Forest remaining unbeaten for long is astronomical.

The ACC boasts five teams in the nation's Top 20 with Maryland at No. 10 and Clemson at No. 19 joining the Cavaliers, the Deacons and the Tar Heels.

For five teams from one conference to be in the Top 20 is truly amazing but for Carolina to be in the Top 20 with four losses, injury problems, graduation losses and a Sports Illustrated poll saying that UNC is not even a possible breakthrough, is really incredibly amazing.

Enjoy the polls, for they mean nothing — except in football where they mean everything.

Cliff Barnes

UNC found out how good the Sooners could be on there-goes-our-chance-for-a-national-title-Saturday, Nov. 1 in Norman, Okla. The Heels were humbled, 41-7.

What if? What if Carolina had won? What if Carolina had come close to winning? What if Carolina had stayed in the game at all?

Even with an impressive 16-7 bowl victory over Texas there was still question as to whether UNC would end up in the football Top 10. Teams with three losses were assured of being in the final ten — but were the ACC champion Tar Heels? Noooooo.

Maybe the Tar Heel's fans sensed that fact toward the end of the Bluebonnet bowl when they began shouting "A-C-C, A-C-C!" If any of the sportswriters and coaches were watching Mizlou (your college play-off-er or no network), it could have affected their vote. The UPI coaches poll placed Carolina ninth while the

The Tar Heels blew away defending NCAA champion Louisville, a team beset with problems, and came from behind to take an impressive win over Indiana on national television.

But losses to Kansas and Minnesota looked bad. Then with three losses Carolina beat highly ranked Maryland and climbed to fifth on the ESPN-cable TV sports network poll.

Some thought that Carolina's fourth loss in Virginia, where they blew a 13-point lead, would force the Heels out of the Top 20.

The No. 17 ranking is due in large part to coach Dean Smith. Perhaps the coaches and sportswriters do not want to sell Smith short — a wise decision. But the players play the game and, unlike football, the aura of a team cannot win the national championship. Whoever wins the NCAA tournament is the champion, period.

Right now it looks as if thirty or forty teams have a shot. DePaul looked likely to be unbeaten and schedule No. 1 come tournament time with a cream-puff schedule full of such teams as Maine, St. Louis and Old

Duke tickets distributed today

Tickets for Saturday's game with Duke will be distributed at 5 p.m. today at Carmichael Auditorium.

North-South Doubleheader tickets go on sale today at the ticket office. Carolina opens the event Friday Feb. 6 against St. Joseph's, then plays Furman the following night in the Charlotte Coliseum. N.C. State is the co-host of the tournament. Tickets for the four-game, two-day event are $25.

ACC tournament ticket sign-up sheets will be drawn at halftime of the UNC-

Duke game. There are 100 tickets available for distribution to UNC students. Eight sheets will be drawn from 67.

The names on the first four sheets will receive the opportunity to purchase tickets for $60 between Jan. 19 and Jan. 23.

If there are any tickets left, alternate sheet 1 can purchase tickets Jan. 26 and 27, while they last. If by some chance there are any left, alternate sheet 2 gets an opportunity to buy Jan. 28 and 29. The ACC tournament will be held March 5, 6 and 7 at Landover, Md.

Track teams on the run

By JOHN HINTON
Staff Writer

The men's track team might not be as good as last year's squad, Coach Joe Hilton feels, but the women's track team is maybe Carolina's best ever, Coach Hubert West said.

The two teams opened the indoor track season Jan. 9 in the 4th Annual Eastman Kodak Invitational at Johnson City, Tenn.

Marla Daniel recorded a school mark of 10:53 to win the two-mile event. Nancy Radford won her section in the mile with a 5:02 and Michelle Langan placed fourth in the high jump.

"This is probably the strongest squad we have had since the program has been in existence," West said.

With the return of sprinter Lisa Staton, who as a freshman was a three-event NCAA qualifier, along with high jumper Langan, hurdler Lauren Lewis and middle-distance runners Lindy Appen, Karen Fischler, Daniel and Radford, the Lady Heels could be the class of the NCAAIAA.

"We're hoping to repeat as state champs this year and to qualify many of our women for the nationals," West said. "However, there will be closer competition this year from N.C. State, East Carolina and St. Augustine College."

On the men's side the Tar Heels managed only a fourth in the open mile relay.

"Early in the season we are probably not that good," Hilton said. "It takes more preparation for us. Our natural ability is not that great and we have to work for what we get."

"We will have a good representative team, but it will not be as strong as it was last year," Hilton said.

Graduation and injuries have depleted the ranks of the men's outfit. Conference champion high jumper Lee Schuler and quarter miler Sam Brown will be missed; both were national qualifiers.

Pole vaulter Chris Mann has yet to return from a late November knee operation, and Steve Flinn, who handled shot put and discus duties, has not fully recovered from fall wrist surgery. A healthy Mann and Flinn will help in making the men's squad ACC contenders, Hilton said.

"We are thin to begin with and then we have these injuries and that really hurts us," Hilton said.

ACC 400-meter champion Wayne Miller returns and will add stability to the team. Miller should be a national qualifier in either the 400 or 600. Also, the mile relay foursome, Miller, Skip Miller, Kevin Lockerbie and Willie Cummings, is expected to compete in the nationals.

Cummings will perform in the hurdles with Phil Farris while James Harris and Farris lend their talents to the jumping events. Competitors Todd McAllister, Jimmy Cooper and Brett Plummer will perform in the distance events.

Hilton hopes to have Kelvin Bryant for the sprints. But that will depend on his academics and football commitments, he said. Football speedsters Wayne Tucker and Delbert Powell might also participate in the men's sprinting events.

OOPS! (Betty and Mary) I don't know ya'll. I mean, like you know, I just want to say one more last thing... like remember our road trip to Duke, 6:30 pm. French toast, Oogie (Mary, how could you?) chicken caesars, carrot salad, our letters (where's your B, Betty?) Christmas bushes, south-beaching, Curves (house runs, being ice-bound in Banner, white girl (S-M-I) the Watering Hole, rain teeth, etc. I just want to thank ya'll for all the fun, love, and support and let you know that this semester will not be taken for granted. Love, Laura.

MIKE, The Hummer Skyline was beautiful from the road, but the stereo in Chapel Hill can be just as nice. See you sometime Karen.

TO THE PRINCESS: Thanks for making me the happiest man in the world! You are so wonderful and beautiful! I'm glad because you're mine and I love you!

FRYER—Yes, I do love you. Love—Joseph. The girl is yours of the legitimate union.
